HONGKONG TAKES FIRST KNOCK.

BRACE PLAYS ON WITH 17 ON BOARD.

FINCHER BATS BRIGHTLY
AT THE START.

PEARCE CAUGHT OUT.

Twenty minutes play in the interport match between Hongkong and Shanghai this morning produced seventeen runs for the loss of one wicket, that of Brace, who had the misfortune to play on his wicket from his pads after making six runs.

Hongkong mustered only a handful of spectators when play opened but this was not due to lack of interest. Opinion generally favours the prospects of the Hongkong side against Shanghai, being less confident regarding the match with Malaya in spite of their defeat yesterday.

The Teams.

Hongkong made one change from the selected eleven. Lieut. A. H. Musson coming in for Captain Reynolds, who was unable to get away. Donald Leach had very good reason to rely upon the team which defeated Malaya.

The teams, therefore, are:
Hongkong: H. R. B. Hancock (Captain), W. Brace, T. E. Pearce, D. J. N. Anderson, E. C. Fincher, H. Owen Hughes, L. Col. F. J. Wyatt, J. E. Richardson, A. C. I. Bowker, A. Reid, and Lieut. A. H. Musson.

Shanghai: D. W. Leach (captain), L. F. Stokes, O. G. Shapton, F. E. T. Marshall, P. Madar, C. W. Howard, W. E. O'Hara, H. E. Orr, T. W. R. Wilson, T. L. Hawthorne, and E. G. Barnes.

The sky was overcast, but conditions were fairly favourable. The new wicket rolled out well, the mid-week rain having improved it rather than otherwise, and it was expected to play fairly easy.

Hancock Wins Toss.

Donald Leach was again unsuccessful in the spin of the coin. "Dick" Hancock elected to bat first, and the innings was opened almost promptly to time, "Brace and Fincher facing the bowling of Wilson and O'Hara.

Brace made no attempt to play any of the first five balls from Wilson, which were pitched well up and backed by a fair speed, but touched the sixth out of the way and stole a single, again obtaining the bowling.

Brace had a narrow escape from being bowled in Wilson's second over by a ball pitched well up. Wilson was making the ball swing away awkwardly. The first boundary of the day came when Fincher pulled O'Hara to leg, and in the same bowler's next over, Fincher again drove him to the ring, a fine shot.

Brace Out.

Misfortune befell the home side, however, when Brace faced O'Hara and played on to wicket. Fincher was 10 not out at this stage.

Later.

"Tam" Pearce joined Fincher and opened well with a fine drive to the boundary off O'Hara, 24 runs having been registered in the first half.

Fincher was a little faulty in his timing, but gave no chance. Scoring brightened when Pearce pulled O'Hara to the square leg boundary. In the same over, however, he hit wildly at a short ball and was easily caught by Stokes at point.

The score at 11.10 a.m. was as follows:

Hongkong 1st Innings.

W. Brace, c O'Hara	16
E. C. Fincher not out	12
T. E. Pearce, c Stokes	6
O'Hara	11
Lt. Musson not out	0
Total (for 2 wickets)	29

11.45 Score:—46 for 5 wks. Fincher, not out, 17; Musson, 1 b.w.; 4; Owen Hughes, 1 b.w.; 1; Hancock, 7; Anderson, not out, 0.
Tiffin score:—85 for 9. (Fincher not, 85).

GERMAN AIRLINER DISASTER.

INQUEST OPENED ON THE SEVEN VICTIMS.

CALCUTTA MERCHANT.

London, Nov. 8.
The inquest on the bodies of the seven persons who lost their lives in the disaster which befell the German air liner in Surrey on Wednesday, was opened to-day at Caterham.

It was adjourned for a fortnight in order to enable Lieutenant-Commander Glen Kidston, who is the sole survivor and who was injured, to give evidence.

The bodies of the German victims will be taken to Germany for burial as soon as arrangements can be made.

They were identified as Bruno Rodschinka, the first pilot, who was in charge of the machine, Heinrich Niklas, wireless operator, Wilhelm Ulrich, mechanic and Prince Eugene Schumburg-Lippe, the second pilot.

One of the three British passengers, whose bodies were identified, was Mr. John Black Whyte, a merchant, whose home was in Calcutta.

Medical evidence was given to the effect that the death of Prince Eugene Schumburg-Lippe, who escaped from the burning aeroplane, but succumbed last night in hospital, was due to extensive burning and shock.—British Wireless.

NO DISCRIMINATION.

London, Nov. 8.
There will be a historic celebration in the Royal Gallery of the House of Lords to-morrow, when H.R.H. the Prince of Wales will preside at a dinner to holders of the Victoria Cross.

The guests, who are being gathered from all parts of the world, number 320 out of the 467 surviving holders. Three are blind men. Only two of those living in Britain will be absent, owing to illness.

Free facilities have been afforded to many V.C.'s scattered throughout the Empire to enable them to attend.

ITALO-SERBIAN STRIFE.

Belgrade, Nov. 8.

In the course of a quarrel at a fashionable hotel in the Yugo-Slavian capital to-day, between the Italian Air Attache, Colonel Cassano and a Serb, Colonel Cassano, according to reports of the incident, struck the Serb, who retaliated by striking Cassano in the face.

The affair has caused great excitement, and the Italian Minister, Signor Galli, called on the Foreign Secretary, M. Marinkovitch, in connexion with the incident. It is feared that it will further embitter relations between the two countries, already tense as the result of the sentences recently passed on Serbian students by the Italian authorities.—Reuter.

have been determined by ballot.

Thus officers of high rank may find themselves seated alongside men who served as privates, and one result of the draw is that the Prince of Wales, who will preside, will have as his immediate neighbours Viscount Gort and Sergeant Burman.

Since the war, Burman has been engaged as a chauffeur.

Those names not drawn for were those of the severely injured men, who can only move with difficulty. These have been allotted special places.

Fifteen more Canadians arrived in London yesterday for the dinner, including the youngest holder of the decoration, Sergeant Ricketts. A large party of Irish V.C.'s will reach London to-day.—Reuter and British Wireless.

NEW STAMP DUTY. LEGISLATION.

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL ADOPTED.

PASSING ON OF DIVIDENDS PROHIBITED.

MUST BE REGISTERED.

It is disclosed in the draft of a Bill published in the current issue of the Gazette that the Government intends to legislate on the basis of carrying out one of the recommendations of the recent Stamp Duties Committee.

The Committee, it will be recalled, was appointed by the Government "to consider the amendment of the Stamp Ordinance with a view to preventing evasion of the stamp duty on share transactions and of the estate duty on shares forming part of the estates of deceased persons."

Two proposals were recommended by the Committee. The first, referred to as the dividend proposal, should be stated, tend to encourage the registration of transfers at the time of each declaration of dividend, and the second proposal should make it easier for the Estate Duty Commissioner to ascertain whether shares standing in the name of a deceased are part of his estate or not.

The second proposal also embodied a provision auxiliary to the first proposal, as it made a deceased's estate liable for contraventions of the dividends section.

Government Decision.

The Government is now legislating on the matter by further amending the Stamp Ordinance of 1921, and in addition to carrying out one of the Committee's recommendations the opportunity is also being taken to make certain other amendments.

Section 6 of the amending Ordinance introduces a section unanimously recommended by the Committee. It is intended to prevent the passing on of dividends to unregistered shareholders and reads as follows:

26A.—(1) No person shall be entitled to claim, directly or indirectly, the payment of any dividend, or of the amount or value of any dividend, on any share on a share register which is by law required to be kept within the Colony, unless (a) such person is the registered owner of the share in question at the time of such claim, or (b) such person was the registered owner of the share in question at some date subsequent to the declaration of the dividend in question, or (c) such person is entitled to be paid such dividend under a bona fide declaration of trust in favour of a specified person or firm, or otherwise, as a bona fide cestui que trust, or (d) such person has bona fide lent money on the security of the share in question and is entitled by the express written terms of the loan agreement to claim such dividend.

Demand Not To Be Made.

(2) No person shall, orally or in writing demand or request, or accept, directly or indirectly, payment of any dividend, which under the provisions of sub-section (1) he is not entitled to claim.

(3) No person shall, directly or indirectly, pay any dividend, or the amount or value of any dividend, on any share on a share register which is by law required to be kept within the Colony, to any other person unless (a) such other person is the registered owner of the share in question, or (b) such other person was the registered owner of the share in question at some date subsequent to the declaration of the dividend in question, or (c) such other person is entitled to be paid such dividend under a bona fide declaration of trust in favour of a specified person or firm, or otherwise, as a bona fide cestui que trust, or (d) such other person has bona fide lent money on the security of the share in question and is entitled by the express written terms of the loan agreement to claim such dividend.

PROPOSED RADIO EXHIBITION.

GREATER INTEREST IN LOCAL BROADCASTING.

POPPY DAY CONCERT.

A proposal to hold a Radio and Gramophone Exhibition on a large scale was raised by Mr. H. Lowcock at the third meeting of the Hongkong Broadcasting Committee on Thursday.

With only one member absent, the Hongkong Broadcasting Committee met for its third meeting on Thursday evening in the Sanitary Board Room, Mr. N. L. Smith presiding. Other members present were:—The Hon. Mr. W. E. L. Shenton, the Hon. Mr. J. P. Braga, and Mr. L. H. King, Prof. E. K. M. Simpson and Messrs. R. Sutherland, O.B.E., B. Wylie, Frank Austin, H. Lowcock, and Chan Heung-pak.

Of the several matters discussed at the meeting, which lasted nearly an hour and a half, the most important was a proposal submitted by Mr. Lowcock to hold a radio and gramophone exhibition some time next month. This proposal was enthusiastically received.

Mr. Lowcock roughly outlined his scheme, which was to hold an exhibition in the City Hall on three successive days, commencing on a Thursday and ending with the last day of the first or third week in December. The main objects of the Exhibition are:—(1)—To arouse interest in broadcasting in the Colony; and, (2)—To afford radio and gramophone dealers an opportunity to exhibit comprehensively radio sets, gramophones and records, and radio gear of all kinds which are obtainable in the Colony. In order to make the exhibition as attractive as possible, Mr. Lowcock proposed that the third and last evening be devoted to a dance night with prizes offered for the best and most original dresses, etc. As a fillip to the show, and also that radio amateurs may find an inducement for the display of their talent, a special prize will be given for the best exhibit of radio sets built by amateurs in the Colony. The price of admission to the Exhibition will be 50 cents only, and $2 for the dance evening.

Mr. Lowcock has already been promised support by no less than sixteen intending exhibitors who are willing to put up $100 each for space allotments for various articles for the Show.

The City Hall will, it is hoped, be provided with a number of audition rooms, so that each exhibitor may have a chance of demonstrating the special qualities of his sets.

More Licences.

The Broadcasting Committee's efforts at supplying occasional entertainments to the Colony, with the kind assistance of local talent, and a daily commercial service, are receiving encouraging support, as the following figures in respect of radio licences show. The total number of licences issued up to the end of January last was 172; to the 6th November they increased to 545. The respective increases for each of the nine months from February to October inclusive are as follows:—51, 41, 41, 27, 31, 34, 27, and 66. For the first five days in November, 27 new licences were issued, which is a convincing indication of the interest that has been aroused by the activities of the Broadcasting Committee, who have been fortunate in being so well served by the Programme Secretary and by the ladies and gentlemen whose contributions to the concerts have been very highly appreciated.

Successful Concerts.

A feature of the Programme Secretary's review of the working of her department to date is the number of reports that have been received in connexion with the various concerts broadcast from the Studio, the Portuguese concert being very well received. The Chairman reported the purchase of Chinese instruments at the suggestion of Mr. Lowcock. The Committee was gratified to learn that the Chinese programmes were considered extremely good.

Radio for Hospitals.

A letter of appreciation was read from the Medical Officer in charge of the Matilda Hospital. The full text of this letter will be broadcast shortly.

It was announced that the Naval Hospital has been equipped and is all ready and prepared with 40 head-phones and four loud speakers for the patients in the hospital to listen in for the first time on November 9 (Poppy Day Appeal). It was also announced that twelve gentlemen had subscribed among themselves a sum of $400, with which an excellent receiving set has been installed in the Army and Navy Y.M.C.A. City Hall.

A suggestion was considered and approved by the meeting that

CELOTEX

INSULATING LUMBER

CANE-FIBRE INSULATION

means protection from the ills and discomforts of cold weather . . . . plus smaller fuel bills

So plan now to repair or remodel your home with Celotex, the only cane-fibre insulation.

Roofs insulated with Celotex retard furnace-heat-leakage . . . protect the entire house from penetrating dampness and chill.

Waste spaces in the attic and basement, when lined with Celotex, are changed into 'delightful' nurseries and playrooms; open porches are transformed into sun rooms, enjoyable all seasons of the year.

No other material seems to provide insulating efficiency and structural strength together quite so well as cane-fibre. . . . .

These fibres—long, tough and durable—interlace perfectly into big, strong boards, 7 to 12 feet long, 7/16 inch thick, also made "double thick"—7/8 inch.

And they contain millions of tiny sealed air cells . . . just what is needed for dependable insulation.

When used on the outside of houses, as sheathing, Celotex adds structural strength . . . makes walls tight and permanent.

And on inside walls and ceilings, you can obtain finer, smoother plastered surfaces with Celotex Lath. This better lath, 18 inches by 48 inches and 7/16 of an inch thick, also made "double thick"—7/8 inch, is especially designed to reinforce against plaster cracks and eliminate lath marks.

"Before you build, buy or remodel, ask your architect, builder or dealer for further information on Celotex—and write us for our free booklet, 'Year 'Round Comfort and Fuel Saving for Every Home.'"

The Celotex Company, Chicago, Illinois. [Member of the Home Modernizing Bureau of the National Building Industries, Inc.] In Canada: Alexander Murray & Co., Ltd., Montreal. Sales distributors throughout the world. Reliable dealers can supply Celotex Standard Building Board and Celotex Lath.

To dispel constipation nothing better exists than Pinkettes, the dainty little laxative liver regulators. Sick headaches, bilious attacks, flatulence, foul breath, vertigo, pimply and sallow complexion, are quickly corrected by their use. Your chemist supplies Pinkettes at 60 cents the vial.

INDIAN PROBLEM.

PRINCE'S PLEA FOR CO-OPERATION.

London, Nov. 8.
The Maharajah of Alwar, one of the Ruling Princes of India, in an address to members of all the political parties in the committee room of the House of Commons, cordially welcomed the announcement in the Simon-MacDonald correspondence, and also the Viceroy's pronouncement, on the ultimate goal of British policy as crystallised in the words Dominion Status.
Having referred to the special position of the Indian States, the Maharajah added that the goal of India did not seem to him to be in doubt, but difficulties appeared when the 'question' was considered as regards the time when this Dominion Status goal might be reached. He continued: "My simple answer to that proposition is, when, by actual consent between the Government of British India and ourselves, our future relations are adjusted so that we can all unitedly work towards achievement of this ideal. The conference that has been suggested will be a fundamental factor, I most devotedly hope, in the achievement of this method, and then it will only remain for each one of us concerned to aspire towards the ideal, which in my case has always been a United States of India, with the States working out their own destiny in accordance with their own traditions and environment; Britain and India going each her own way, neither interfering with the other in their domestic or internal concerns, but uniting together in matters of common interest.—British Wireless.

WOMAN'S WORLD FOR OUR LADY READERS.

coiffed head! Billie Dove, smart First National star, sanctions the coronet hairdress, a style in perfect accord with her regal personality. The bobbed-haired miss can put her own locks in a net of fine mesh and circle an extra braid of hair around her head, achieving the idea. For the woman who has kept her tresses long, it is a distinct departure from any idea seen recently. This, for the formal arrangement. Will it be a forerunner of the "puffs" and the return of the "Gibson Girl" pompadour? Time will tell.

The old adage about a woman's hair being "her crowning glory" was never more pronounced than it is in this ultra-feminine era of 1929-30. The adoption of frills in our attire, brings with it the necessity for a soft feminine coiffure, not sacrificing however "individuality."

But before any of these considerations comes the need for shiny lustrous hair, which is every woman's heritage and incidentally the paramount requisite of loveliness.

Generally at the close of the summer months, regardless of what care we have given it, we discover our hair is inclined to be dull, sun-strained and a little coarse, however now with the approach of cool weather we can give our hair the careful attention we neglected during those lazy hot days.

A regular routine of hair culture, just as most of us thoroughly treat our skin, should be our daily duty. To begin with we resume our nightly brushing, vigorously from the scalp down to the roots—this custom if adhered to religiously will in a very short time prove most gratifying—the hair grows bright and very much alive, thus insuring its healthy state, for brushing exhilarates the growth of the cells in the scalp and stimulates the circulation of the blood. Massaging the scalp thoroughly after brushing is most beneficial. It is popularly assumed amongst beauticians that a regular weekly hair wash will "do the trick," however, that can be left to the discretion of the individual, inasmuch as different heads react differently to this treatment. Pure castile soap is an excellent shampoo for most heads. When the hair is slightly faded and rather brittle, an oil treatment is most effective. Hair specialists stress the value of a green soap or egg shampoo for oily hair. However, before using any shampoo or additional lotion, it is well to consider the texture and quality of the hair, for your mission is to beautify rather than deter the healthy condition of the hair. And, only healthy hair can be beautiful!

After the loveliness of the hair is achieved we can devote our thoughts to "the most becoming coiffure."

Pre-war fashions, styles that have not been seen for more than a decade, are returning to popularity, since the dressmaker period is once more upon the style mart. With the return of the Redingote, the princess and trotteur styles, Milady is finding herself at the cross-roads of hairdress modes. However, with a little study of "type," the movements of the hair, contour of the head, line of the face and the mode of the moment, Milady can evolve a very becoming and artistic coiffure. First National stars are aware of the significance of a beautiful

SATURDAY NOV. 9, 1929.

THE INDIAN STATES.

In the rather unnecessary controversy which has arisen over the expediency of re-stating the aim of Britain's policy in India, we fear that a very vital part of the Viceroy's proclamation on the subject is in danger of being overlooked. We refer to the decision to call together, after the issuing of the reports of the Simon Commission and the Indian Central Committee, representatives of the constituent parts of Greater India for the purpose of seeking the greatest possible measure of agreement between British India and the Indian States. There is a tendency on the part of many people to regard India as a unit, and to forget how little of the total area of the country is included in the Provinces of British India and how much of it represents the territories of the Indian States. The Viceroy, in his proclamation, stressed the importance of the Indian States being afforded an opportunity of finding their place and of ensuring that any action taken now shall not be inconsistent with the attainment of the ultimate purpose which those, whether in British India or the Indian States, who look forward to some unity of all India, have in view. The problem which has to be faced is not merely the future of British India—there is the wider question of closer relations between the two parts of Greater India.

The Princes who administer the Indian States have long been noted for their loyalty to the Crown, and have always insisted on their individual sovereignty being maintained by the British, and by the British alone. But a fact to be borne in mind is that the leaders of Nationalist opinion in British India have been in the habit of displaying indifference to the aspirations of the Princes and at times have been openly hostile to them. In this connexion, it has been pointed out that even the eminently moderate All-Parties Conference Report, proposed to place them in the same position of subordination to the commonwealth of British India as they have hitherto occupied to the British Crown. This attitude springs partly from a general dislike of monarchical institutions and partly from a feeling that both the loyalty of the Princes to the Crown and their claim to its continued protection may present a serious obstacle in the way of an advance to Dominion status.

Sufficient has been written to show that it will be by no means an easy matter to adjust the Indian question on a basis satisfactory to all parties concerned. It does seem clear, however, that when Dominion status is achieved, the States must occupy neither the position of subordination which the Nehru Committee contemplated, nor that of privilege which the Princes would appear to claim. To define and establish the position will be one of the chief duties of the big conference which is to meet later in London. As one qualified commentator has observed, the problem is not one which can be left for India to solve for itself, nor yet one which can be settled by a brief discussion. It involves a harder test of real statesmanship than any other in India. We can quite appreciate the jealousy of the States regarding their sovereignty, but it does seem that if real unity is to be secured the Princes must come to recognise that they have much to gain by coming inside the constitutional and economic framework of the commonwealth, even though such entry may involve a further admission of the limits of their sovereignty.

Shanghai's Triumph.

Shanghai's wonderful triumph against odds and Malaya has earned them all the real honours of the Interport Cricket Week. Even defeat by Hongkong could not deprive them of these. The whole history of interport cricket contains no record of a finer achievement than the uphill fight which brought success by the narrowest possible margin when the soundest judgment in the pavilion reluctantly denied them any real chance. Shanghai had their backs to the wall from the time the innings commenced. A score of 259 on the Hongkong ground is an excellent one at any time. The objecting of such a total in the fourth innings of a strenuous encounter on a pitch sparing the batsmen little cannot be over-praised. The foundations were laid by L. F. Stokes, who went in first and did not succumb to the excellent Malayan attack until the score-board showed 167 runs. Donald Leach found inspiration in the brilliant effort of Stokes and gave one of the most magnificent displays of a long career, hitting up 95 (not out) in three hours out of 189. Yet victory was within the grasp of Malaya until Leach sent the winning hit to the boundary. In this the excitement of the match consisted. The usual trite references to the glorious uncertainty of cricket seemed futile in the circumstances. In congratulating Shanghai, however, there should also be a thought of sympathy with Malaya. They played magnificent cricket throughout an arduous match. Their fielding in the fatal innings was tighter than that of either side at any other period of the game. In short, the Fates were against them. Stokes might easily have been out before he had scored three runs. If he had been taking anything for granted when Hopkins hit his stumps from the field he would have been run out. Leach's supreme effort might have been brought to an end in the fifties when he nearly played on and he gave a very difficult chance to Lal Singh in the slips during Wilson's adventurous innings. When Gibson, Malaya's finest fielder, dropped Wilson, their "cup of bitterness" was filled.

"ALIBI" COMING.

ULTRA-MODERN "TALKIES" FOR THE QUEENS.

Marking the most forward step yet made in the new art of talking and sound pictures, "Alibi," United Artists all dialogue under-world thriller, is coming to the Queen's Theatre next week.

No motion picture in recent years has aroused as much enthusiasm from audiences as "Alibi," for it gives an entirely new conception of sound film technique, offers the most thrilling plot of any underworld story, and presents the greatest array of stage favourites ever assembled in one production.

"Alibi," produced and directed by Roland West, who has to his credit such successes as "The Rat," "The Unknown Purple," "The Monster," and "The Dove," is based on the stage play, "Nightstick," which enjoyed long runs in New York, Los Angeles and other cities.

In making "Alibi," the first all-talking thriller to come out of the huge United Artists studios in Hollywood, West was particularly well equipped for the job, for he enjoyed years of experience as a stage actor, playwright and producer before he pioneered in the film. In "Alibi" he also had the advantage of using the world's most modern talking picture plant, recently completed on the United Artists lot, and a cast of stage favourites, every one of whom has a voice that registers perfectly.

"Alibi," adapted for the screen by C. Gardner Sullivan, is described as a powerful story of crooks, police, gay night life and love. Although heralded as a melodrama, the picture contains some of the biggest laughs of the year, and also gives the world a couple of sensational new musical hits, written especially for the production.

Among the players in "Alibi" are Chester Morris, former New York stage star, whose performance in his first picture may make him a screen star overnight; Eleanor Griffith, another New York star who has never before appeared on the screen; Pat O'Malley, Ma Busch, Harry Stubbs, Regis Toomey, Purnell Berratt, Kernan Cripps, Irma Harrison, James Bradbury, Jr., Al Hill, De Witt Jennings and Elmer Ballard.

WHO IS ORIGINAL?

All a Question of Insight.

A famous saying of Emerson's exhorts people to be themselves and not to imitate. It is grand counsel from a great man. It sends one's thoughts to Browning's poem, "Old Pictures in Florence." There one may see what the Concord sage was driving at. The poet had wandered through the Florentine galleries, and he had looked upon specimens after specimen of medieval art to be found there. His thoughts went away from it right back to the classic art of Greece. The Greek statues, he said, had a perfection and a completeness with which the medieval pictures could not hope to compare. The Greek works were so finished, they were absolutely the last word. And yet, says the artist, the Greeks were able to attain that completeness and that perfection just because their range was limited and their view somewhat restricted.

For centuries artists rested in that old perfection. They were content to imitate the classical model. At length Giotto and the rest began to express a fresh view of humanity. The Greeks had perfectly expressed the thought of human joy in statues of Apollo; they had perfectly expressed the idea of human grief in the carvings of Niobe. But were there not scores of other expressions of human joy and grief to be discovered? And so Giotto and his contemporaries ventured to leave the few types so familiar in Greek art, and to exhibit men with all the longings, all the passions, all the hopes and fears and aspirations that swept the world in the Renaissance. But to do it they had to leave the perfection of the last ages, and through all the imperfections of the present, with all the struggles which expressed what they were feeling and what they saw, they had to find their way to a fuller perfection, which had not yet come, but which could come, and did come in the future.

Now this, or something like it, is doubtless what Emerson meant. And it has been the same all through the history of art, the history of music, the history of mankind. The new generation strives to realize the new perfection of which it has dreams. Unless this is done humanity sinks to mere imitations, mere conventionalisms, and not true successors of those who have wrought before.

Nevertheless, Emerson's counsel that we are to be ourselves and not imitate is a severe test, and places a strain upon the individual difficult, if not impossible, to bear. One wonders how far art would really flourish in the strict observance of such advice. How would architecture, man's story in stone, develop if the architect depended entirely upon his own resources? In America, where we have been free to express our dominant moods, attitudes, and ideals in the way we have lived, it is both significant and clear that most of our splendid architecture is a rather close copy of some lovely structure in Europe.

In literature imitation has been prevalent ever since Homer wrought his great works. The same is true with respect to Virgil. In his day, writes J. W. Mackail, "Virgil was hotly assailed with the charge of plagiarism by his own contemporaries; but it never seems to have troubled him much. He knew his art. He knew that the thing that matters is not where a poet gets his material, but what he does with it. Whether from Homer, or from Apollonius, or from Theocritus, or Parthenius, or from Ennius or from Lucretius, and Varro of Atax, or from his own friends and fellow-students, he took, largely and unsparringly, whatever he found in them that served his purpose. What he took he made his own by the mere act of taking it. Homer had done the same thing long before. Both argosies are freighted with the treasure of many sunken ships." The friction of great contemporaries produces many a spark of nature's fire; and mutual borrowings would seem to enrich the race. Swift, with sardonic tongue, puts our borrowings thus:—

Your modern wits,
Should each bring his claim,
Have desperate debentures on your fame.
And little would be left you, I'm afraid,
If all our debts to Greece and Rome were paid.

Immac, the ancient sage, said to Rascals: "The writers took possession of the most striking objects of description and the most probable occurrences, for fiction, and left nothing for them that followed on but transcription of the same events, and new combinations of the same images." Brander Matthews tells us that Shakespeare "reached out again and again to possess himself of another man's work." Milton left his pedestal of the gods to possess himself of materials with which to enrich his "garland of poetry." "Paradise Lost" draws some of its inspiration from Voltaire's "Lucifer." Balzac appropriated an entire chapter of Bulwer-Lytton's "Disowned." Sterne has quarried in Burton, and many others. A. W. Ward says Thackeray took ideas from Dickens. Such a writer as Goethe acknowledged his debt to Shakespeare, Sterne, and Goldsmith. A thinker like John Stuart Mill wrote that he had made his style "at times light and almost lively by the study of writers who combined in a remarkable degree ease with force." Quite recently it has been shown that John Henry Shorthouse helped himself liberally to whole paragraphs of "Froissart's Chronicles" in the writing of "John In Casant."

It would seem from this recital of literary borrowings that what Stevenson said himself might not misapply to many lesser writers: "Whenever I read a book that particularly pleased me I must sit down at once and set myself to imitating that quality of propriety and conspicuous force, or happy distinction in style. I was unsuccessful at the commencement of it, but I got some practice in these vain bouts in rhythm, in harmony, in construction and in co-ordination of parts. I have thus played to sedulous ape to Hazlitt, Lamb, to Wordsworth, to Browne and De Quincey, to Hawthorne, to Baudelaire and to Obermann."

Are we original. We may find we are not. We have borrowed in art, music, literature; our very modern mechanics looks back into the past and therefore cannot scorn its rich inheritance. Complete originality is an impossible ideal. Even the New Poetry only recognizes itself in the mirror of its indebtedness to the Old.

We are brooding for a vital thought when a nice parable presents itself to our alert consciousness. It is all neatly written out when the discovery is made that it has been written before—and better! We train our powers of perception and observation to catch at tropes and figures of speech; we even become skilled in the manufacture of metaphor. We have one! Our quest of it is like that of schoolboys after butterflies in bright skies; we pin it down with notewords, the gold dust brushed from its wings, when lo! we discover we have made a Platonic perfection into a halting confusion.

Our most original contribution will sometimes reveal itself as a reminiscence. And how often, per in hand, we are plagued with and deceived by half-memories; we remember the thoughts, but not whence they have been derived. Our struggle for novelty often ends in a clear recognition and realization of antiquity.

John Foster says, "It is the privilege, the exclusive privilege, of genius to light its own own fire." And as if echoing the truth of this F. W. Robertson says, of himself, "I cannot copy, nor can I work out a seed of thought developing myself. I cannot light my own fire; but whenever I get my fire lighted from another . . . I can carry the living flame as my own into other subjects which have been illuminated in the flame."

The question is where does plagiarism begin and originality leave off? According to Chesterton, plagiarism is taking another's thoughts and passing them off as

WHO WAS . . . ELAINE?

Elaine, "the lily maid," appears in the Arthurian cycle of romances.

Strictly brought up in her father's castle, Elaine met Sir Lancelot while he was passing through the neighbourhood, and fell desperately in love with the knight.

Sir Lancelot, however, was sworn to celibacy and could not marry her, both on this account, and on account of the fact that his heart was already pledged, illicitly, to Queen Guinevere.

And so the handsome knight rode on, while Elaine died of great grief. According to her last request, her body was placed on board a barge, a lily in her right hand, and a document proclaiming her love in the left, and steered up the river by an old serving man to the place of King Arthur.

The great King accorded her a royal burial, and the sad story of her death was blazoned upon her tomb.

You may read about this pure and beautiful maiden in Tennyson's "Lancelot and Elaine," a poem that should serve to introduce you to this exquisite cycle of poems entitled "Idylls of the King."

CURRENT COMMENT

Poppy Day.

On Monday next, Armistice Day, collections will be made in aid of the Fund inaugurated by the late Earl Haig, and it is naturally hoped that Hongkong will exceed previous records. The Hongkong Automobile Association has arranged to issue garlands of poppies for motor car decoration, and these may be obtained from the office of the Honorary Secretary, Mr. C. P. Marce, c/o Messrs. Pentreath & Co., Alexandra Building.

The Wrong Angle.

During the week the suggestion was made in a contemporary that "the system of control of the public motor cars of the Colony is all wrong," the comment relating to public hire cars which are allowed to park in the open. The criticism was brought about following a local magistrate's suggestion that a public car driver charged with loitering and loitering, should lose his licence. The view was expressed that all the public hire cars should be confined to garages, and there await telephone or personal calls before going out on the streets. Such an idea is most unreasonable, the effect being to penalise the majority for the sins of the few. There are many objections to such a suggestion, and it is really difficult to see how they could be overlooked. In the first place, those who have attempted to telephone to a garage where none of the staff can converse in English, will readily understand the inconvenience to the public as well as the handicap imposed on the car owners themselves. Then there is the fact that many of the public hire cars are owned by the drivers, and one can easily imagine the annoyance of endeavouring to locate one of these in a hurry.

Public Service.

It must be remembered that apart from the few drivers who certainly do cause annoyance by loitering and loitering, the introduction of the system whereby public cars were allowed to ply for hire from authorised parking stands, was largely responsible for greatly decreasing the cost of car hire in this Colony. Time was when the fare to Magazine Gap, for example, varied from three to four dollars, while to-day, thanks to the enterprise of Chinese who began operating hire cars, it is possible to make the journey for under two dollars. The convenience and benefit which have resulted from the present system cannot be overlooked, and the suggestion that these people should be removed from the streets cannot be entertained for one moment.

We quite agree that severe punishment should be meted out to those who do make themselves a nuisance, and the mere fact that stern measures are adopted will doubtless have the necessary effect.

Help to Trade.

It should not be forgotten that the fact that there are so many public hire cars available has proved an important and profitable matter to the motor trade, and will naturally continue to be so. The question is well worthy of consideration from this angle alone, because the more cars sold in the Colony, the greater the prosperity to the dealers, and incidentally, the greater the sum derived by the Government from licensing fees. Were the suggestion carried into effect to clear our streets of the public hire cars not engaged, the result would merely prove as a distinctly unfair handicap to the local turnover of the motor vehicle industry.

New Rolls-Royce.

Rolls-Royce Limited announce that after prolonged tests they can now demonstrate and accept orders for a new 40/50 h.p. Rolls-Royce Chassis.

The original chassis of this type was the famous "Silver Ghost" and in 1925 the "Phantom" was introduced. This new chassis will be known as "Phantom II".

Like the "Phantom" it is equipped with a 6-cylinder engine having a bore of 4 1/4 inches, and a stroke of 5 1/2 inches, with a total cylinder volume of 7,668 cubic centimetres. The R.A.C. rating is 43.3 h.p.

The effect of new features which the "Phantom II" incorporates is to provide a car of reduced height and lower centre of gravity, improved appearance, greatly improved suspension at all speeds, steering control giving greater selectivity and ease of operation, lighter weight, increased acceleration and maximum speed, time and trouble-saving method of lubrication and still greater refinement throughout the chassis.

This new chassis will retain all the characteristic features which have gained for their car the accepted title "The Best Car in the World."

"Phantom II" is not intended to compete with racing or ultra-sporting types of cars, nevertheless it will more than maintain the position of the "Phantom" as achieved amongst its owners of being the fastest genuine touring car in the world.

S. A. FUEL TEST.

Pontiac Does Well.

37.6 MILES PER GALLON.

Owing to the high cost of petrol in South Africa, fuel consumption tests are always of public interest and are especially watched by motorists who are seeking economy of motor operation. Recently a fuel consumption test that attracted wide attention was that conducted by General Motors South Africa. On this test a Pontiac car was driven from Johannesburg to Pietersburg, a distance of 21 miles, on an average petrol consumption of 37.6 miles per gallon.

The test was under the official observation of the Transvaal Automobile Club. Officers of the club and representatives of the local newspapers sealed the gasoline tank at Johannesburg. The tank contained eight and one-quarter imperial gallons of petrol. When the car reached Pietersburg the seal was broken by the Mayor and the tank was found to contain two and one-half imperial gallons. Throughout the run the car behaved perfectly. All types of roads were encountered.

DRIVING COSTS.

Can be Reduced by Care.

SIMPLE WARNINGS.

Bad driving habits and improper care of the car are usually responsible for abnormal consumption of gasoline, according to Mr. E. M. Van Voorhees, managing director of General Motors Japan Ltd., who points out examples of these faults.

Letting the engine run at high speed while idling in traffic. Many drivers have this wasteful habit.

Unnecessary acceleration, that is, stopping on the accelerator unsteadily.

Racing the engine in spurts when waiting for the traffic signal.

Driving with fouled spark plugs. This wastes about 20 to 25 per cent. of the gasoline used for every plug that is out of commission.

Dashing up to a stop street and then jamming on the brakes. Also this is hard on a car and is a dangerous practice.

Dragging brakes waste gasoline and wear out brake linings.

Driving too long in first and in second gear before shifting to high.

Careless drivers frequently pay no attention to simple warnings of coming trouble in their car. What would usually amount to a minor repair if attended to at once often is permitted to grow into a large one. This is why periodical car inspection and overhauling is advisable to keep cars in the best operating condition.

REFUELLING A MODERN PASSENGER PLANE.

One of the large passenger planes operating in the United States shown taking on gasoline. The entire tank full was necessary.

LEAKAGE RISK.

Grease from the Differential.

CAUSE OF TROUBLE.

One of the most serious sources of trouble is leakage of grease from the differential in the rear of the car. Winter and summer this important part of the automobile is not guarded as carefully as the motor itself, it will make itself felt to a surprising degree.

A motorist's neglect of that element is one of the service men's greatest problems. A car owner will think of fresh oil for the crank-case but will often forget to renew the oil or grease in the rear. Yet there is a moving, grinding assembly that calls for a change of lubricant at least twice a year.

The heavy grease advised for use in the rear end during summer is practically useless, if not altogether harmful for winter.

So there is a definite time for making the change in differential lubrication—early spring for the summer lubricant and fall for the winter oil.

When a grinding, metallic noise comes from the rear and the winter lubricant has not been used, the differential should be inspected. The grinding may result in wear down the teeth. The motor can't turn the rear axle without the effective use of this gearing.

Even when the lubricant has been changed for winter driving, with the application of a heavy oil in place of grease, a real cold spell will cause much of the oil to harden and cling to the sides of the housing. However, there will always be enough loose oil in the differential to act sufficiently as a lubricant for the gears until the car has been run for some distance and the warmth from the action of the differential loosens up the hardened oil.

Oil or grease, when worked in, should reach to the lower inspection hole. If the oil reaches above this, the warmth of the gears will force some of it through the packing or retainers, and out over the brake lining and the tyres.

Oil leaking through to the brake lining and the inner sides of the tyres makes short shrift of these. The hazard lies in the destroyed brake lining, while the financial loss lies in both that and the rotted casings.

Oil discovered along the inner sides of the tyres should be sufficient evidence of a serious leakage from the differential.

GRUELLING WORK.

The following letter was addressed by Capt. Malcolm Campbell—whose greatest failure to establish a world's speed record is fresh in everybody's memory—to the South African representative of Morris cars:

"It may interest you to know that at the present moment and for the past ten years I have owned standard Morris cars. I have also owned other makes, some of which I have taken to pieces for my own amusement. Fitted them with specially designed parts, and obtained freak speeds with them on Brooklands track, but my Morris cars have always remained mechanically as received from the factory.

"My present Morris is used to tow some of my specially-built racing cars from point to point in England, and in spite of this gruelling work, in addition to her other duties, she has never once let me down. In fact I am so pleased with her that as long as I own motor cars, a Morris will always be found in my garage."

THE TRUTH IN ADVERTISING.

The Story of a Motor Boomerang.

"No dealers," decided Belinda. "We'll sell the bus ourselves. A nicely worded advertisement—"

"Containing the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth," I added.

"Of course. But we needn't overdo it, need we? People who buy cars like to find things out for themselves. Suppose we say something like this: '20 h.p. Dodge for Sale. Nearly New!'"

"Would you call a pre-war model 'nearly new?'"

"Recent model," she corrected. "After all, it was a late 1913. And much better work was put in before the war."

"You are overlooking the fact that much of that work has fallen out in the road since. I suppose we have one or two of the original nuts left."

"Entirely remodelled," she wrote briskly, "with all modern improvements."

"You must give details."

"I know. Something like this: 'Coupe, drophead, overstrung grand, under-damper check action—sorry, that's pinnos. Bother. I'll copy one of the other advertisements. Here's a nice one: 'Six-cylinder—'"

"We have only four."

"Does that matter? The really important details are the maroon body, upholstery to tone in moquette."

"Very faded."

"Moquette always fades slightly. They'll know that. Complete with ashtray, matchbox, and Felix mascot. Or does the Felix mascot rather date it? It might be wise to spend a shilling or so on a really new mascot. You see, we've said, 'With all modern improvements.'"

"Ought we?" I asked dubiously. "Of course. Haven't we a self-starter?"

"We've a black knob on the dashboard. But it doesn't start anything."

"If you read my advertisement carefully, you will notice I don't say it does. I'm anxious to state nothing which is not strictly true. Then there's 'electric horn.'"

"Out of action!" I added.

"We may as well leave them to find out how it works. They may think they've broken it by tooting too loudly."

"No driver," I explained patiently, "ever thinks that any action of his could possibly damage a car; why, when you ruined the gears—"

"I didn't," she exclaimed hotly. "You know perfectly well—"

"We called at Smith and Didlums' garage next day. They had diagnosed the trouble but could promise no cure, and offered to take our pre-war model in part exchange for a new car. This seemed the best we could do, but we thought a second-hand car would suit our purpose better. We did not care for any of the second-hand cars in their premises."

"There are plenty advertised," they pointed out, fetching out the motoring journals. "Just choose one and we'll get it over and tune it for you, at a small commission."

"Now here's the very thing to suit you. Same make as your own, but much later, remodelled, and in perfect condition. Listen."

He read aloud our own advertisement.

"You see?" I cried triumphantly, "and people who buy cars are so suspicious."

"I'm sure they've no need. We're putting down nothing but facts. 'Mileage low.' They'll see that by the speedometer."

"It has been disconnected."

"Before we bought it. It's not our fault. And we can't be expected to know that. I think that's enough. You don't think I'm pitching it too strong?"

"I don't mind what you say," I agreed, "so long as you do not say 'Easy starter.'"

"Most of the cars advertised are easy starters."

"Mine isn't one of them. That is why we are selling it."

"But you have an easy starting device?"

"Six of them. But it is not an easy starter."

"It wouldn't be wise to say 'Six Easy Starting Devices' would it? Readers would suspect something. Just 'Easy Starting Device.' That's true, isn't it? I should hate to mislead the public."

After a week, we received one enquiry, which we answered by a letter in which truth fought a losing battle with tact. The enquirer turned up next day and drove off on a trial run. Four hours later he had not returned.

"He's stolen it," cried Belinda. "We must ring up the police."

"Give him a sporting chance," I advised. "The police would only send the bus back. And we are insured."

Two hours later we received this wire:

"Bus a dud coned out mag lappets plugs washouts abandoned smith and didlums garage salisbury jones."

We called at Smith and Didlums' garage next day. They had diagnosed the trouble but could promise no cure, and offered to take our pre-war model in part exchange for a new car. This seemed the best we could do, but we thought a second-hand car would suit our purpose better. We did not care for any of the second-hand cars in their premises."

"There are plenty advertised," they pointed out, fetching out the motoring journals. "Just choose one and we'll get it over and tune it for you, at a small commission."

"Now here's the very thing to suit you. Same make as your own, but much later, remodelled, and in perfect condition. Listen."

WORLD ROAD CONGRESS.

The World Road Congress will be held in Washington, D.C., October 7-11. Roy D. Chaplin, chairman of the highways committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, back from a European tour, reports that several thousand leaders in highway construction will attend.

SCENIC ROAD STARTS.

Work has been started on the scenic highway from Pasadena to Azusa, Calif. When this highway is completed it will traverse one of the most beautiful sections of the United States. It is estimated that the road will cost around $3,700,000.

DEATH'S HUGE TOLL.

It has been estimated by the Public Safety Department of the California State Automobile Association, that America's motor fatality record for 1929 will exceed 29,000, if the deaths increase during the second half of the year in proportion to the first half.

"AIR-MINDED."

The fact that 12 states now have more than 1,000 licensed airplanes owned by individuals or commercial concerns is proof of the saying that the country is 'growing air-minded.' New York leads in the ownership of planes, with 753 licensed aircraft. California is second and Illinois third.

HINTS FOR THE MOTORIST

ALBERT L. CLOUGH

HUMOURING THE OVERHAULED ENGINE.

It has become pretty generally understood that a brand new engine, which has seen no previous road service, must be humoured very carefully during its first thousand miles of running, by being operated only at low speed and with special attention to lubrication, in order to avoid scoring its cylinders and burning out its bearings. The reason for this is that all bearing surfaces—not only the cylinder walls but the bearing surfaces of the pistons and connecting rods—are in a relatively rough and crude state and moreover that they are initially fitted together somewhat overtightly, so that after their "high spots" are worn down, they shall still operate without undue looseness. This combination of imperfectly smoothed and over-closely fitted bearing surfaces entails high frictional losses, abnormal heating and the liability of the breaking down of protective oil films and the mutual cutting and roughening up of the rubbing faces of working parts. The fact is, however, not so generally recognized that an engine which has just been overhauled presents similar conditions and calls for the same careful "nursing" as the engine just turned out from the factory. Nevertheless this is the case. Cylinder-bores may have been given new surfaces by some reconditioning operation, new piston-rings, with imperfectly conforming faces or overtightly fitted, may have been installed, new bearing bushings with somewhat imperfect surfaces may have been inserted or the old bushings re-adjusted to a tighter fit to their shafts. In short, the same conditions of bearing surfaces not yet worn smooth and in too tight adjustment are almost certain to prevail. An engine upon which some or all of the above repairs have been made, should not be accepted, if it handcranks unreasonably hard. The repairman should be made to "run it in," until its stiffness has nearly disappeared, thereby assuming the responsibility for the soundness of his job. When put in service, it should not be run at nearly top speed for a thousand miles at least, signs of overheating should be watched for, it should occasionally be handcranked to see if it is limbering up properly and its oil should be drained and renewed after the first hundred miles of road service and twice thereafter at two hundred mile intervals. Running on gasoline to which about three per cent. by volume of engine oil has been added is recommended, during the "wearing in" period.

Starts Hard Even in Summer.

Question:—The engine in our car has always been hard to start, even in summer and in our heated garage. We invariably have to use the choke, and if starting is unsuccessful on the first attempt, and the choke has to be used a second time, gasoline drips out of the carburetor. What is the cause of this trouble?

Answer:—Your difficulty in starting, even with the engine warm, indicates that the carburetor adjustment is extremely lean, that there is some leakage of air into the intake system above the carburetor mixing chamber or possibly that the fuel level is abnormally low in the carburetor float chamber. This is assuming that the ignition system is O.K., with spark-plug gaps not too wide and a good spark. You better have an inspection made to see that the air-valve and needle-valve adjustments of the carburetor are correct, that the fuel level is right and that the carburetor flange connection and the connections of intake-manifold branches are all gas tight and no other chance for air-leakage present.

Develops a Squeak.

Question:—The last time I drove my car I noticed a high pitched continuous squeaking, not loud, but rather piercing, which kept up as long as the car was moving, whether the engine was running or not. What do you think causes this?

Answer:—We don't know, but it may be that the bearings of one or both of the front wheels are not being lubricated properly. Jack them up and see if they squeak when they are turned by hand. If so, their bearings need to be packed with grease at once, as they will be spoiled, if allowed to run dry. If you do not find the squeaking at the front wheels, it may be in the rear axle. We think it is a dry ball or roller bearing somewhere, which is making this noise.

BLUE LEADS.

Popular Colour for Cars.

OTHER FAVOURITES.

The most popular colours in the automobile field, according to a report of a survey just released by General Motors Export Company, are blue, brown, grey, green and black. Maroon, yellow, red, orange and beige also are great favourites.

Light blues of intense luminosity are very popular on medium priced cars. Clear, dark, rich blues continue in favour upon cars of more expensive make.

The acceptance of brown, especially the lighter shades, has increased during the past year. It is possible that the brown trend may surpass blue in importance.

The relative movement of green and blue trends is interesting, the former having declined in almost the same ratio as the latter has gained in popularity. Black is more popular in the fall and winter. The trend of grey is declining but there is an interesting movement in the grey group (brownish or bluish tints) which is gaining favour for use in colour schemes where strong accentuating and intensifying notes are needed.

Neutral greys are losing ground rapidly due to the interest in bright colour.

Maroon is advancing steadily in popularity while yellow, red and orange are losing to it in preference.

In general, contrasting colours are gradually losing favour for use on automobiles. Chromatic sequence (tints and shades of a single colour family) is the most harmonious and most popular colour treatment in use to-day and is already firmly established as the vogue of the year.

MOTOR STATISTICS.

British Motor Cycles Predominate.

A.J.S. MOST POPULAR.

Statistics of public motor cars, motor buses, taxis and motor cycles registered in Hongkong and Kowloon up to the end of last month, details of which are appended, show that British manufacturers' products predominate to a very large extent in the motor cycle world while American cars have secured most of the market for public cars. The total number of taxis in the Colony is 80, all of which are British, while all the 162 motor buses are British with the exception of 13 American buses.

It is interesting to note that there are 25 British makes represented in motor cycle figures, making a total number of 333 machines. A.J.S. heads the list with 96, Harley Davidson being second with 81. There are 17 American makes represented, totalling 113 machines; also two French and two German makes, with totals of seven and four machines respectively.

Taxis, of which there are ten each, are Hillman, Clyno and Morris Oxford. Six British makes are included in motor bus figures, representing 149 machines, Thornycroft leading the way with 51 and Dennis occupying second place with 28. There are three American makes, totalling 13.

Nearly all public cars are of American manufacture. Among these are 19 American models, totalling 252 cars, Studebaker being in the lead with 51. There are four British makes with a total of nine cars and one French make, this being Minerva with eight machines.

EFFECT OF THE "TALKIES." REVOLUTIONISING THE CINEMA INDUSTRY.

Never before in the history of motion pictures has the industry seen such a change as that which it has undergone since the advent of the "talkies."

Not only has the heretofore silent drama been given a voice, but the methods of producing the speaking pictures have been constantly changing. Scarcely a week passes but what some new device is perfected for improvement or simplification of production.

Even the personnel of the business has undergone a decided change. New faces are seen on the silver sheet. And there are an infinite number of new faces which the public never sees—stage directors, singing teachers, elocutionists, electric wizards, song writers, musicians, playwrights, artists and a host of others.

Industry is Made Over.

This change has been so gradual yet so rapid that few realise what the industry has gone through. If one stops to analyse what has happened he will realise what a truly remarkable feat has been performed.

Compare the movies with the automobile industry. When Henry Ford changed the style of his car, his entire factory, considered one of the most efficiently operated in the world, was closed down for a full year at a loss of many millions of dollars. Yet when motion pictures underwent just as radical a change they did so without a single studio closing its doors. Theatres the world over had to be supplied with films and the pictures were produced to meet the demand. Sound and silent films were made on adjoining stages until sufficient equipment could be installed to make them all with sound and dialogue.

Natural Colour.

To-day the articulate film is being made almost as efficiently as and in some cases more so than the old silent picture. But the industry has not stopped at that. Natural colour has been added, and very successfully. Soon we will have pictures giving the impression of having three dimensions. And after that—who knows what will come.

From a financial standpoint the production of pictures to-day is about the same as it was a year or two ago. It costs about the same to make the average talking film that it did to produce the general run of silent films. But the "talkies" practically have eliminated the million and two million dollar specials. Producers have learned that huge production

Just as they appear to have pushed some favourites from the screen, the talkies are bringing others back. No. 1 is Betty Compson, whose popularity was fading until it was discovered that she could sing, her most recent feature role having been in "On With the Show." No. 2 is Florence Vidor, who starred with Emil Jannings in "The Patriot" but whose voice seems unequal to the talkies. Practically the same applies to May McAvoy, No. 3, whose voice also fails to "register." But Beanie Love, No. 4, seems to have recovered much of her fading glory in the oral films, as evidenced by her excellent work in "The Broadway Melody."

values do not necessarily add interest to a film. As a result few pictures now pass the $500,000 mark and most of them are kept far below that.

"Talkies" Run Limited.

In keeping with their costs, the returns of the "talkies" are less. The old silent productions used to run two or three years before they were finally put on the shelf. A talking film does good business if it runs six months. That is because the "talkies" constantly are being improved and even the small-town theatres that are wired for using them insist upon having up-to-date films.

The primitiveness of native ferry boats is illustrated by the above, which is one of the most important ferry boats on the West River, at Shiu Hing. The boat shown is conveying passengers to one of the steamers of the Kwong Wing Company.

VILLAGE CAGE AT LINGFIELD.

An interesting survival of the village lock-ups of past generations is the cage at Lingfield, Surrey. It stands close by an old oak, and of recent years has been restored. Local history tells how some 70 years ago a party of poachers rescued during the night eleven of their comrades by removing the roof of the cage with picks and crowbars. The cage was last used as a lock-up in 1882. (Times copyright).

PLAN TO OVERCOME WATER SHORTAGE.

The lowness of the River Ouse at Huntingdon is causing the local Corporation considerable anxiety, as the sanitation of the town depends on a good supply of water in the river. Among the contributory factors to the shortage of water is the condition of the lockgates at Houghton Mill, which fail to hold up the water, and the Corporation are seeking powers to purchase the mill with a view to its demolition and the rebuilding of the locks. A picture of Houghton Mill, which is a place much visited by artists. (Times copyright).

PARIS is going to make sophisticates out of all women this year. The sweet young thing with the baby stare and the kittenish ways, who got by with them beautifully last year, had better start right out and buy some shoulder-length earrings and a stinky dress so that she will look like a siren until she makes the psychological adjustment and learns the new technique in dress.

While Youth will never cease to be desirable, it is about to learn to be less obvious. For some time, owing to short skirts, it has been quite undesirable for a woman to be a woman. No matter what her years, or how many grandchildren she had, she had to look like a flapper. Youth was served so hard on all sides that nothing else counted.

Today the well-known pendulum has swung back. Women may be women again—they may have curves, though no one should abuse the privilege. They may—and must—cover their knees, and wear clothes that have dignity, grace and line. They may wear hats that are not severe and uncompromising, but that flatter and save. In fact, the style in femininity at the moment is not girls, but women—which is going to be a great relief to a large group of the so-called weaker sex.

RIGHT here, before getting down to the matter of clothes, take warning that gloves have staged a come-back in Paris—this means long, elbow and shoulder-length gloves. With a pink evening frock, Paris approves of long pink glove gloves. With a white satin frock, the outdoor woman can obliterate the sunburned arm with long white gloves. And long black kid gloves are seen for afternoon and evening alike—particularly with a thin black net or chiffon gown are the black gloves appropriate.

After all, this going back to femininity is no half-way enterprise. You've got to go the whole way. There is no doubt but often you will remember the good old days when skirts were short and bobs were boyish.

I. NO ONE is able to make quite such a glamorous affair of a flowered taffeta as Louiseboulanger. She can add puffs, bustles and panniers and other undesirable sounding ingredients, and finish up with something that any woman would give years of her life to wear.

The model here photographed is made of warp printed taffeta in shades of blue and green subtly blended and contrasted. The dress introduces side puffs and a train with considerable conviction. The bodice is long and very simple, nothing being allowed to detract from its slender lines. Everywhere in Paris one sees lame used more than ever before, particularly in evening wraps, and for afternoon when it is often tailored, and handled as a much less ornate material usually is.

II. FOR formal occasions to wear with the velvet and satin gowns with long skirts, Marcelle Lely has created this black velvet turban, quite smooth in front, with an exaggerated bow at the back. The white selvage is utilized as a decoration. It is an unexpected touch like this, sounding so incongruous, that makes French creations such a delight!

One of the outstanding features of the fall and winter collections is the use of wool, not only for frock and coats, but for millinery. The tweed chapeau of this season is not severe, but is a marvelous manipulation of extraordinary material.

III. TWO outstanding turbans are photographed today, both created by Leon, the Paris hatter.

In the first turban, a long stocking of angora wool jersey has been manipulated to leave one end free and form something of a decoration in the way of a piquant side effect. This is ideal for sports wear, and you may expect to find many versions of it this winter at St. Moritz, Quebec, Lake Placid and other spots where ice and winter sports are featured.

IV. THE second Leon model is likewise a turban made from a long strip of angora wool jersey. This strip can be fashioned into any number of individual turbans, so long as the line is kept close and neat. It can be developed in colors to match your frocks or coats, or it can be of a brilliant red or green to give an accent to a dull-toned ensemble.

V. FOR morning, or for sport, or for travel, Louiseboulanger suggests this tweed coat which comes in a black and white mixture, which has a different weave on the inside, of yellow and black. She adds a smart touch in the scarf, tied like a cravat, made of the lining. There is a clever cut at the waistline, defining the higher line, and incidentally providing a pocket that is a real joy.

MOTOR NOTES FROM GREAT BRITAIN.

[Special Report to the Hongkong Telegraph by "R. A. C."]

A New Rolls-Royce.

For quite a long time there have been rumours that a new Rolls-Royce model was in course of preparation and, further, that it would be of the sports variety. Now that the veil has been lifted it is made clear that the new product of the famous Derby works is a redesigned "Phantom" chassis, and is not a sports model. However, it incorporates a number of features which bring it right into the forefront of modern ideas.

The original 40/60 h.p. chassis was the famous "Silver Ghost" and then in 1926, the "Phantom" was introduced. The latest addition has the same engine of 7,668 c.c., but with construction with the gear box is now improved. Lubrication of the chassis is by a centralised system and the rear springs are now of semi-elliptic type instead of the former cantilever. The new design of buck axle allows the height of the chassis generally to be reduced and, in fact, the effect of the new features is to give a lower centre of gravity, improved appearance, better suspension at all speeds and increased acceleration and maximum speed. Otherwise the new chassis retains all the characteristics which have put Rolls-Royce cars in a class apart.

A Special Overseas Model.

Quite one of the most arresting among the new models so far announced from British factories is the 20/70 h.p. special Overseas Talbot. This has been designed specifically to meet the requirements of motorists who want something more powerful than the 14/45 h.p. on which the Clement Talbot factory has concentrated with great success for the past three years.

The new model with its 2,276 c.c. engine will give, what is so often asked for abroad, an outstanding top gear performance, and being very strongly built it will stand up to the worst roads. Particular attention has been paid to the suspension; semi-cantilever type springs are used at the rear, fitted underneath the chassis. The frame is of pressed steel of deep section and has an "X" cross member in the centre. The clearance is 9 1/4 inches.

From Midland Factories.

The Humber "Snipe" is essentially a very modern production and certainly one of the most attractive cars that has ever come from the well known Coventry works. The engine has a cubic capacity of 3,498 c.c., but it is the gearbox which is of particular interest. This has an alternative top or silent third, which is as noiseless as the direct-drive ratio. It is most useful for traffic conditions and for winding roads.

The "Snipe" is capable of a genuine 75 m.p.h. and as the world export rights are in the energetic hands of Rootes Ltd., it will soon be seen in the Overseas markets. The five models listed by Wolseley Motors have proved so successful that they are being continued without alteration for 1930, but the 21/60 h.p. 6-cylinder long wheelbase model, recently introduced, will bring the number up to six. These consist of the 12/32 h.p. 4-cylinder, 16/45 h.p. and 21/60 6-cylinder (also the long wheelbase model), and the two straight-eight models, the 21/60 h.p. and 32/80 h.p.

To meet the demand for more luxurious equipment, however, the County de luxe models are being introduced. These, in addition to the standard equipment, will have chromium plating on all external fittings, radiator shutters, Triplex safety glass, dipping headlights, two spare wheels and so on.

The Singer Senior Six has the distinction of being the cheapest British Six and its announcement has made something of a sensation. The car, which is of 15.7 h.p., has been subjected to the most strenuous road trials, the first one produced having now covered well over 100,000 miles. Although the price of the saloon model is as low as £275, the specification includes Triplex glass, and chromium plating.

Simplifying Maintenance.

An interesting feature of the Singer Super Six is the provision of Luvac central chassis lubrication. By this system one simple operation from the driving seat oils every bearing on the chassis, there are no moving parts in the pipe line and the oil is delivered in a measured quantity. Thus, the dirt and drudgery of hand greasing are eliminated, unlocated squeaks and rattles are banished and longer life is assured to every chassis bearing.

Gradually all the unpleasant jobs that fall to the lot of the motorist on his lawful occasions are being simplified. Thanks to chromium and cellulose finishes, cleaning does not hold the terrors of old; central lubrication systems are eliminating the grease gun. Now comes the Jackal four-wheel jack, manufactured by S. Smith & Sons, which makes jacking a simple and cleanly matter.

The equipment consists of four small tubular telescopic jacks permanently fitted close to each wheel. A lever and a small flat box on the running board complete the outfit and, by means of the hydraulic system used, anyone can raise and lower one or all four wheels in a few seconds without any effort.

Standardising Motor Cycle Controls.

It is good to learn on the authority of the British Cycle & Motor Vehicle Manufacturers' & Traders' Union that a form of layout has now been officially recommended for both twist grip and lever types of motor cycle control and it is anticipated that many of the British factories will incorporate these in future models. The use of a standard form of control will undoubtedly remove a potential cause of accidents while at the same time it will assist the manufacturer.

A very neat arrangement of handlebar control is now employed on the Triumph models, C.N., C.O., and C.S.D. All the controls are integral and the cables are concealed within the bar itself. Twist grips are used for the throttle and ignition and these are quite accessible, while nipples are placed at the ends for pressure gun lubrication. This new handlebar and its controls is certainly one of the best efforts made so far to clean up the general design and will appeal to the discriminating owner.

Features of 1930 Models.

A feature of the 1930 Ariels is a new pattern gear-lever which ensures an easy change and makes it practically impossible to miss middle gear. An innovation for motor cycle practice is the fitting of an oil pressure gauge; this is mounted in the top of the tank and indicates that the dry sump lubrication system is working correctly. To the technically minded the new design of engine shock absorber is of interest, and the inlet valves of the O.H.V. machines are now lubricated by suction from the crankcase.

The new Matchless models incorporate no fewer than 75 new features many of which are of particular importance to Overseas users. For instance, chromium plated finish is used for all the bright parts of the machine, which means that even in the most humid climate, and however badly the machine is neglected, it is free from the ravages of rust and tarnish. Trouble-free lubrication on the dry sump principle is now employed and another feature of great importance is the interconnected brake system, by which operation of the brake pedal on the off-side of the machine applies both front and rear brakes.

The new side valve engines have totally enclosed valves and car type detachable cylinder heads. Enclosing the valve gear keeps out all dust and ensures that the tappets and valve stems are properly lubricated.

Huge Orders for Commercial Vehicles.

Some truly huge orders have recently been placed with leading British commercial vehicle manufacturers. One of the largest ever placed for heavy motor transport was the order for 223 rigid 6-wheelers Albions for the Indian Government. The total value of this contract is well on for £250,000 and it is interesting to note that the order is the direct result of the experience gained with a number of Albion 6-wheelers highly satisfactory.

Since the principal British railways commenced to operate road motor vehicles they have made substantial purchases and the record railway contract was placed recently by the Great Western for 100 Thornycroft 30-cwt. and 100 4/5 ton freight chassis to a total value of well over £100,000. The G.W.R. fleet of Thornycrofts, including vehicles purchased in earlier years, will be the largest in the world under one ownership, which distinction has hitherto belonged to the South African Railways, whose immense fleet of over 300 Thornycrofts has been built up within the past five years.

Transport for the Worker.

Discussing the question of heavy traffic routes in large towns, "Bus and Coach" emphasises a very human side of the matter. If traffic can be speeded up, more particularly at rush hours, the effect is to add to the leisure time of workers. Thus, if half an hour can be saved while going and coming in the morning and evening, the result to the worker, from the standpoint of time available for recreation, is exactly the same as if his working day were reduced by half an hour, without any reduction in his wages.

Transport authorities must supply the type of transport which is demanded by the riding public and, in this connexion, it is instructive to see the growing demand for the trolley bus, both at home and overseas. The type has three outstanding advantages: speedy operation, quiet running and low cost. At Maidstone, in Kent, where a fleet of Ransomes 6-wheel double-deck trolley buses has been in operation for some time, the past year's operations produced a profit of £3,800 in respect of these vehicles, whereas the trams and petrol buses each experienced a loss exceeding £2,600.

In addition to the riding public, those people who spend their days in buildings facing on to busy thoroughfares appreciate the quiet running of the trolley bus.

Dustless Refuse Collection.

For several years there has been considerable controversy in the world of Public Cleansing regarding the methods employed in house-to-house refuse collection. The ideal state of affairs entails dustless collection and hitherto, this was a long way from realisation.

Karrier Motors, however, have evolved a machine which marks a step in the right direction. This is a Rotary Loader which not only conveys the refuse from a low loading orifice into a sealed container, but automatically packs it without any manual effort. Refuse is shot into the chute of the rotary loader and falls directly into the inner area of the rotor which has specially spaced blades. There it is partially screened and separated, then, by centrifugal force, the refuse is thrown towards the rear of the container, the force being sufficient to pack the refuse firmly at the back of the body and gradually to fill it up towards the delivery end.

The machine was most favourably received when it made its first appearance in June at a Conference of the Institute of Public Cleansing.

THE MODERN WAY.

Exploring by Motor Omnibus.

DESERT SECRETS.

Fifty years ago an exploration trip into an unknown African desert was a momentous task involving a considerable number of animals and natives for the necessary transport, and probably months of careful planning. Now-a-days, a few picked officials step aboard a Thornycroft motor bus and in as many days as their predecessors took months, or probably years, the secrets of the desert are probed and plans are formulated for another patch of the map to be commercially developed.

very special treatment. Some of the large pieces of electrical machinery now being produced are cases in point. These sometimes stand very high necessitating a particularly low loading platform.

John Fowler and Co. of Leeds recently constructed an 85-ton low platform trailer on 16 wheels arranged in sets of 4, the overall length of which was 37 ft. The platform height, unloaded, was 2 ft. and, in order to obtain the maximum clearance every rivet on the top of the platform was countersunk.

Each set of 4 wheels carries its load on a transverse axle, thus leaving the bogie free to oscillate in a fore and aft direction. In addition, each pair of wheels can oscillate independently in a lateral direction by means of a longitudinal axle between the wheels. This arrangement gives complete freedom of movement for every individual wheel to follow the undulations of the ground and to carry its proportion of the weight in any circumstances.

The brake gear had to be specially designed to operate evenly in any position of the wheels, and brakes are fitted to the rear 8 wheels only. The loading space in the "well" is 16 ft. 1 in. by 7 ft. 9 in.

MOTOR BUSES IN PLACE OF TRAINS.

Drastic Changes Anticipated in the Highlands.

The near future will see drastic changes in traffic conditions in the Highlands as the result of a decision reached by the L.M.S. Railway Company to substitute motor buses for trains in certain areas. Already one or two lines have been examined by inspectors, and within a short period all the branches which are not proving paying concerns will be "looked into with a view to such a change."

The move will, of course, result in further additions to the list of unemployed railwaymen, but the railway authorities have been literally forced to take action to safeguard themselves. The increase in the number of bus services in the Highland districts has been so rapid that the company is unable to compete with them in the way of reduced fares. The loss of passenger traffic has compelled the authorities to such a decision.

Lines Concerned.

The branch lines in the Highlands concerned in the change-over are:

1. From Muir of Ord to Fortrose.
2. From Dingwall to Strathpeffer.
3. From Gollanfield to Fort-George.
4. From the Mound to Dornoch.
5. From Lybster to Wick.
6. From Georgemas to Thurso.

Already inspectors have examined the Black Isle railway and the branch to Strathpeffer and have come to the conclusion that buses must be substituted for passenger traffic and the line left only for freight. It is expected that the others will come under the same category, with the possible exception of the branch from Gollanfield to Fort-George and the Georgemas to Thurso. It will, however, occasion no surprise should these two lines be treated in the same manner.

The Black Isle railway was opened little more than 30 years ago by the old Highland Railway Company. It ousted the transport by sea from the Thornburgh, Inverness, to Fortrose, which the old G.S. Rosneath, under Captain Grievie, carried on successfully for a long period of years. Very few people thought then that, within such a short space of time, the railway would be superseded by motor bus services, but the inroads on the passenger traffic by the Inverness and district fleet of cars has accomplished it. And now the L.M.S. and S. are to fight back with the same weapons.

The deputations of officials from the railway authorities who are carrying out investigations made a thorough examination ere reaching the decision they did, both in the case of the Black Isle railway and the Strathpeffer branch. They went carefully over the revenue and expenditure of the system and decided that they were too costly to be carried on under existing conditions. Thus it is that buses are to be substituted.

The Muir of Ord to Fortrose railway employees will be hard hit by the change over to the "road traffic." The line will become a mere shadow of its former self, and the five stations intervening will become little more than goods sidings. About 20 men will probably be thrown out of their present employment and either transferred to other stations or dismissed. A number of them will, naturally, be retained on the permanent way, for road maintenance. Such will be the case also at Strathpeffer, only fewer men will be thrown idle, as the line measures but five miles as compared with 13 in the Black Isle. Incidentally, Muir of Ord Station will be shorn of a great deal of its glory, while Dingwall will also suffer to some extent.

The branch from The Mound to Dornoch must necessarily be treated the same as the Black Isle line, and here, too, the bus services have so affected the passenger traffic that the line will, more than likely, be closed down except for freight, and motor buses substituted. The officials have not gone over the ground yet, but already it is surmised that the change will be made.

There are three intervening stations between The Mound and Dornoch, consequently railwaymen will be hard hit by the change here also, and the same may, by said about the employees on the Lybster to Wick branch, where there are four stations between the termini. The latter line, of course, was never a great paying proposition even before the introduction of motor buses, hence the change will not occasion any great surprise, although it will prove a bit of a blow to the employees.

Fort-George.

There seems to be some dubiety as to whether the Fort-George-Gollanfield and the Georgemas-Thurso branch will share the same fate as the others. As far as the first mentioned is concerned, the railway authorities are under some obligation to the military authorities with regard to the transportation of troops at a moment's notice, and this may affect the proposed change. Indeed, it may mean that the line will remain as it is with the same service.

With regard to the Georgemas-Thurso line nothing definite has yet been proposed, and until the officials took it over little can be said. Thurso is the port for the Orkneys, hence the traffic is slightly heavier than the other stations concerned, and it may happen that nothing may be done. There is a distinct possibility, however, that a Wick-Thurso bus service may be instituted, and if that becomes a fact, the line may be treated like the others. Thurso will be adversely affected if the change does take place, and quite a number of railwaymen will be thrown idle, as the station is a fairly large one.

That the railway authorities will have to do something to defend themselves in Calithness is only too well known. The bus services there are of the very best and their rates are considerably cheaper than those offered by the railway company. The return fare from Thurso to Wick by bus is 1s. 6d., whereas by train it is 2s. 6d. It will therefore be seen why the buses are so popular.

The changes all over will mean a great deal to the Highlands, and whether the public are to benefit by them or not remains to be seen, although it is expected indeed it is only but reasonable to think—that the fight for passenger traffic will mean still cheaper rates. The service offered to the public will decide whether or not the new systems are to prove a success or not.

FOREIGN TRADE.

Importance of Commercial Cars.

BRITAIN'S BID.

A definite step in British competition with foreign manufacturers for the motor car trade in the Dominions is now being made by Bean Cars, Ltd. This company has just designed a new Empire model truck chassis of 40 and 50 cwt. capacity, the heavier vehicle suitable for this country, and the lighter adapted to the peculiar road conditions of Australia and other Dominions. This new type of commercial car is capable of running with a load of 52 cwt. 238 miles per day of 10 hours. So far, the new truck has had 150,000 miles of testing, and the company's factories are already turning them out in large numbers for both the home and Dominion markets. The springs and other metal equipment in the new chassis are made of Sheffield steel.

FROM PEKING TO LONDON BY CAR.

Major D. M. McCallum of the British Army and his party land at Dover, England, after having completed 15,000 miles in Buick cars.

The story of Major D. M. McCallum's motor trip from Peking to London is interesting but a few incidents are outstanding from the motorist's viewpoint. Major McCallum is an officer in the British Army and a well-known traveller. On this occasion, he and his small party made the 15,000 mile journey in two stock model Buicks. The descriptions alone of the obstacles that had to be overcome are sufficient evidence of the durability and stamina of the cars.

An excerpt from Major McCallum's complete account of the trip follows:

"We shall never forget the high snow-covered mountain passes of Northeast Persia, where dromedaries blocked our path at the narrowest and most precipitous spots, nor yet the wild night in the caravan-serai far up in the mountains overlooking Meshed, with the continuous sound of camel bells throughout the night, as the caravans padded softly over the snow in the brilliant moonlight.

"An incident in the Taurus mountains stands out in clear relief where a landslide had almost swept away the track along the edge of a dangerous precipice. We were obliged to crawl breathlessly along, the near-side wheels forced up on the slope of the mountain, tilting the cars over at an unbelievable angle.

"Although the cars of the expedition came through the 15,000 mile ordeal without giving any cause for anxiety and gave us no trouble at all beyond ordinary care, that does not mean that the journey was free of incident. Leaving China, we crossed into Indo-China to follow the famous old Mandarin Road. This road, centuries ago, was the highway between South China and Siam and in modern times has been restored to a great deal of its old importance by the French. The road is officially known as 'Route Coloniale No. 1' and is an excellent first-class motor road from one end of Indo-China to the other.

"One of the most interesting places we stayed in during our journey was the old city of Meshed, tucked away in the northwest corner of Persia and cut off from the rest of the world by the enormous mountain ranges which shut in on all sides the valley in which it lies. Struggling over snow-covered passes, it seemed as though we should never reach the city. Then, just as we crossed the last crest lying to the south, we beheld, almost at our feet, a blue haze of smoke against the green floor of the valley and could make out in the distance, thousands of feet below us, the wonderful blue-tiled minarets of one of the holiest shrines of the Mohammedan world.

"Meshed is to the Shia sect of the Moslem religion what Mecca is to the Sunnis. This sacred shrine is jealously guarded by its adherents. All approaches are protected by heavy chains slung across the roadways and zealous followers of Islam are posted behind the chains to see that no infidel attempts to force his way in.

"Not much has been said about the purely motor difficulties encountered. In the course of a long journey of this nature it can be readily understood that the trucks are not always of such excellent quality as the roads of India or Western Europe. We have often been asked about the progress we made each day. The distance varied, of course, for all sorts of reasons. On several occasions more than 300 miles were covered in a day. At other times, only a few miles were completed and that at the cost of a great deal of energy. The lowest total completed in any one day was 11 miles, when we travelled from 7 o'clock in the morning until 1 o'clock the next morning and only with the help of a team of mules were we pulled out of the worst of the mud. The road, on this occasion, had been thoroughly soaked by continuous rainfall which had reduced the roughest and steepest of tracks to a heavy gluey mixture in which the wheels of the cars stuck fast."

GRAHAM-PAIGE.

Detroit being the hub of the automobile universe from which most cars in use in the world to-day are shipped, it has become a matter of increasing interest to visitors to Detroit to see what various manufacturers are doing in the matter of prompt despatch of spare parts. This is a natural interest for the man who is buying a car to know the promptness of the service he is going to receive on that car. When a car-owner needs a spare part for his car, nine times out of ten, no matter where he may happen to be, he wants that part in a great hurry.

An interesting sidelight on how one large automobile manufacturer jealously guards a reputation it has built up for speed in filling spare parts orders, especially when shipment is via Pacific and Atlantic steamers, is revealed in the case of the Graham-Paige Motors Corporation. This company has inaugurated a new spare parts division which is housed in a four-story plant of 262,000 sq. ft. floor area, and which contains an inventory over a million dollars worth of spare parts.

An order is received at the new parts and service plant of Graham-Paige, is despatched by pneumatic tube to the proper department for filling—travels along by an endless conveyor system—is packed and shipped by one of three services—an hourly mail service, a two-hour express service, or a daily freight service. So rapid is the entire operation of despatching the goods, once an order has come to hand that this new addition to the Graham-Paige development scheme is regarded as a model of speed and efficiency by the entire industry. Speed in delivery of parts to more than 75 foreign countries is essentially a Graham-Paige feature that is a matter of importance and convenience to Graham-Paige owners the world over.

6-CYLINDERS LEAD.

The Change from the Four.

HOW CALCULATED.

For the first time in the history of the automobile industry, six cylinder cars promise to lead the field in production this year, according to a survey by the Chevrolet Motor Company just completed. Up until this year four cylinder cars ranked first in annual production volume.

Comparative production figures for the first six months of this year are offered in support of the forecast. During this period there were produced approximately 1,900,000 sixes as compared with approximately 1,265,000 fours, an indication of what the total for the year is apt to be.

How the change comes about is illustrated in the survey. Chevrolet's manufacturing goal for the year is 1,350,000 cars. Chevrolet's change-over from a four to a six cylinder car, means a deduction of this enormous total from the four cylinder field and adds it to the six cylinder field.

How the automobile picture has changed almost overnight will be noted in an inspection of the 1928 showing. Last year when Chevrolet was producing a four cylinder car, four cylinder manufacturers built approximately 2,098,000 cars, with one large manufacturer of four cylinder cars on limited production due to model change while six cylinder manufacturers were making 1,617,000 cars.

As it now stands the year 1929 should show approximately 3,000,000 six cylinder units as compared to only 2,250,000 four cylinder units.

Consequently this significant development, which will make the current year an epochal one in the annals of the automobile business, comes about chiefly as a result of the entrance of Chevrolet into the six cylinder field.

THE QUEEN MAKES AN ART DISCOVERY.

WRONG DESCRIPTION TO A GAINSBOROUGH.

How the great knowledge of art possessed by the Queen enabled her to detect a mistake unnoticed by the famous experts of the day is told in the October number of the "Connoisseur."

Art dealers have frequently been surprised by the accuracy of her Majesty's judgment, but those who know her intimately realise that if she had not been a Queen she might have been known as one of the foremost authorities on art of her age.

Until quite recently a Gainsborough picture in the Lady Lever Art Gallery at Port Sunlight has always been described as a portrait of Princess Augusta Sophia, second daughter of George III. It was sold as such in the Harland Peck collection, 1920, and entered as such in a recently issued illustrated catalogue of the Lady Lever Gallery.

The Gainsborough picture was not a portrait of Princess Sophia, but of Anne Luttrell, Duchess of Cumberland, sister-in-law of George III.

Although hundreds of men and women have seen the Gainsborough picture, including some of the greatest art authorities in the country, it remained for the Queen to detect the error.

Apparently, the Queen saw a copy of the catalogue, for she communicated the fact that the description was an error, and informed the authorities that the portrait was one of Anne Luttrell.

The Queen has a wide knowledge of 18th century portraiture, and perhaps she alone of all the art lovers in this country had the knowledge which enabled her to say at once that a mistake had been made.

Celebrated Beauty.

The "Connoisseur" says:—Anne Luttrell was one of the most celebrated beauties of her time. Eldest daughter of Simon Luttrell, first Baron Innham, afterwards Earl of Carhampton, she was the widow of Christopher Horton, of Catton, when she captivated the affections of the Duke.

As the Duchess she does not appear to have been a complacent sitter, for Wright, of Derby, complains bitterly of the lady's vagaries, when he painted her at Bath, and records that neither of her portraits by Reynolds

DREAM REVEALS A MURDER.

SKELETON UNDER HEAP OF STONES.

Berlin, Sept. 24.

Light has been thrown in curious circumstances on a murder mystery which for ten years has completely baffled the criminal police.

One Sunday, in October, 1919, a farmer, named Friedrich Deickert, of Gunow, near Frankfurt, on the Oder, went for a walk and was never seen again. His wife and three sons were arrested on suspicion of being privy to his disappearance, but were subsequently released, as no evidence was forthcoming on which to prefer a charge.

For some time past, however, a cartwright, named Hellmut, has spent his spare time making private investigations. He went about probing various likely spots with a long crowbar, but without avail, until one night he dreamed that the body of Deickert was lying under a heap of stones on Deickert's estate.

Examining the heap in question, Hellmut came upon a skeleton. With the aid of the police, a watch was discovered among the remains, which a local watchmaker was able to identify as that of Deickert.

The wife and three sons were again arrested, and one of the sons is alleged to have confessed that he strangled his father in consequence of a family quarrel.

pleased her. Gainsborough, however appears to have entirely satisfied the Duchess, for both she and the Duke repeatedly sat to him.

The lady was in advance of her time and found herself in agreement with King George III. in preferring Gainsborough to Reynolds as the greatest portrait painter of that day, an opinion that posterity has endorsed, though formerly it was ridiculed.

Sense of Criticism.

Mr. C. Reginald Grundy, the Editor of the "Connoisseur," told a Press representative that the Queen's sense of art criticism, as applied to portraiture of this period, had been shown some years ago.

On that occasion Mr. Grundy was conducting the Queen round a large private collection. On coming to an example of the period a stop was made. The Queen announced that the description of the portrait was probably inaccurate, and that the picture represented another person.

DREARY OFFICIAL FILM.

GOVERNMENT'S HEAVY HAND.

The question as to the ways in which official co-operation can be of value to a film is acutely suggested in the first all-British travel-talkie, of which the film itself without the talk was privately shown recently in London. It is called "Through the Dragon's Mouth," and is a study of life in the West Indies, produced under the auspices of the Colonial Office, with the co-operation of the Governors of the Colonies.

The tour had been arranged, filmed, directed, produced, photographed, edited, and titled by Mr. H. E. Hayward, and the project was said to have been encouraged by Mr. Amery at the time he was Colonial Secretary.

No more hopeful theme could, of course, be imagined from the point of view of history, romance, the beauty of landscape, and human interest than these wonderful lands of the Western sea—Trinidad, Tobago (Robinson Crusoe's island), Grenada, St. Vincent, Barbados, and St. Lucia. Mr. Hayward takes us through the narrow channel now named "The Boes," but called "The Dragon's Mouth" by Columbus when he first sailed into the Gulf of Paria.

Here and there, Mr. Hayward does show in his pictorial voyages, especially at some of those "health resorts" on the Trinidad coast which are only waiting development, glimpses of island-paradises as lovely as anything that Kingsley proclaimed.

The Governors' Assistants. It has to be confessed, however, that at times the hand of the Government is almost as stiflingly heavy as that of Epstein's "Night" upon her dreaming offspring.

About a third of the scenes were, Mr. Hayward told us, actually staged by the Governors concerned. The result was that instead of the picture being consistently the lively, jolly, romantic entertainment it might have been, we had all too many dreary official "shots"—town-halls, residences of Governors (with or without "himself"), engine-rooms, religiously complete towns of the Imperial College of Tropical Agriculture and of Government stock-farms, the packing of grapefruit and oranges, machinery for oil-wells, the piling-up of tar-barrels from Trinidad's famous asphalt-lake, sugar factories, cocoa-export, displays of local troops and police forces, show-tables at exhibitions and specimens in glass cases in museums.

Mr. Hayward assured us that the talk, which will ultimately go with the film, is exceedingly bright and racy; but as it stands, the official part of the film is desperately lacking in liveliness and humour.

The recent experience of other films in which Government officials have openly "co-operated" as, for instance, "The British Navy Ashore and Afloat," which admittedly could not find a single layer in the home market—a great pity, as the low officials have to do with the actual making of a film the better.

"BURIED ALIVE" TRICK
ENDS IN TRAGEDY.FAKIR'S DESPERATE STRUGGLE WHILE UNDER-GROUND.

Buenos Aires, Oct. 3. On being dug up after doing the "buried alive" trick in a circus at Cordoba, "Blackman," a well-known "Indian" fakir, was found to be dead. The broken window of the coffin and bleeding hands and face were evidence of his struggle for life.

In the performance, the fakir allows himself to be placed in a hermetically sealed coffin with a small glass window, and buried about six feet under ground, remaining in this state to the end of the performance, roughly about three hours. The secret of the whole thing is that the coffin contains just sufficient air for the person inside to breathe for three hours. It is assumed that the "fakir" lost his presence of mind, and as soon as he felt the earth falling on to the coffin broke the glass in a frantic effort to get released, thereby releasing the small supply of air that was to keep him alive. The circus proprietor was arrested.

BERLIN SENSATION.

ARREST OF A WELL-KNOWN DRAMATIST.

Berlin, Nov. 8. There has been a sensational arrest of the dramatist, Peter Martin Lampel, author of "Poison Gas Over Berlin" and "Revolt in the Borstal Institute," who is suspected of implication in a murder by the "Black Reichswehr," which was active some years ago, and of which he was then a member.—Reuter.

NEW STAMP DUTY.
LEGISLATION.

on such share by any previous registered owner of such share.

(5) Every person who contravenes any of the provisions of this section shall upon summary conviction be liable to a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or not exceeding the total amount of the dividend in question, whichever limit be the greater.

Other Amendments.

Other proposed amendments are explained as follows: Exemption (b) to Heading No. 16 in the Schedule to the principal Ordinance exempts "trust receipts given to a banker." The intention evidently was to exempt such documents from stamp duty altogether, but it has been suggested that it might be arguable that a trust receipt given to a banker, while not liable to duty as a declaration of trust, is liable to duty as a mortgage, under the provisions of section 8 (3) which lays down that an instrument which is chargeable under more than one heading in the Schedule shall be charged under the highest duty. Section 3 of this Ordinance accordingly adds to the definition of the term "mortgage" words which exclude from the meaning of that term "trust receipts given to a banker."

Heading No. 24 in the Schedule to the principal Ordinance, which deals with the stamp duty on leases, does not provide for the case where the term of the lease is indefinite. Section 10 of this Ordinance supplies this omission.

Heading No. 24 in the Schedule to the principal Ordinance is open to another objection also, in that it makes the stamp duty on the surrender of a lease the same as the duty on the lease. This seems to be inequitable and might work considerable hardship in some cases. Apparently in England the stamp duty would be only the ordinary deed stamp of 10s. Section 11 of this Ordinance makes the stamp duty on surrender of a lease the same duty as would be payable on a lease for the residue of the term surrendered, any consideration for surrender being regarded as premium.

RUTH VAN VALEY
COMPANY.ANOTHER ENJOYABLE SHOW
LAST NIGHT.

Again at the Star Theatre last night, a large audience enjoyed an excellent programme provided by the Ruth Van Valley Company. Rex Storey, the most versatile comedian we can ever remember seeing in Hongkong, was in great form, his juggling and knock-out work being exceptionally clever, while the droll humour of his jokes and mannerisms kept the audience in a constant state of laughter. In much of his work, Rose Lee, who has become a great favourite, contributed in no small measure to the fun provided.

The dancing of Ruth Van Valley, was, of course, of a high standard, and met with a warm reception. Manikins introduced several new items which were thoroughly enjoyed, while the other items of the programme completed a really excellent show.

The extension of the season will be welcomed, and it is expected that there will be crowded houses to-night and to-morrow night. A special matinee for children takes place to-morrow at 5.15 p.m.

BIGGER WICKET.

WARNER'S HOPE FOR AUSTRALIAN TESTS?

London, Oct. 8. P. F. Warner, who was the guest of the Authors' Club, devoted his speech to a comparison of English Australian cricket. He expressed the opinion that the success of England in the coming Tests depended upon young bowlers, Maurice Tate always excepted.

Success, he said, would depend upon such youngsters as Clarke, Voce, Goddard, Robbins, Allan, and Peckham. It was significant that Warner did not mention Larwood.

"The batting side," said Warner, "must be built around the big four. Hobbs, Hammond, Woolley, and Sutcliffe." Incidentally, Warner justified the Marylebone Club's direction of the Test tours on financial grounds. It had run the Australian tours so satisfactorily, he said, that the Dominion now demanded that its control should continue.

Come to Stay?

Referring to the changes in the cricket laws, he thought the bigger wicket had come to stay.

He hoped Australia would adopt, in the Tests, the bigger wicket. It was noteworthy that 100 fewer centuries were made in English cricket last season, doubtless partly due to the fiery wickets, arising from the drought, and partly to the l.b.w. rule, but certainly partly traceable to the effect of the bigger wicket upon batsmen, who were less than first-class.

Warner did not think the l.b.w. change would become law or be tried next year. He paid a tribute to Victor Trumper, as one of the greatest cricketers who had ever handled a bat.

WHO IS ORIGINAL?

one's own. Milton suggests that to borrow "without beautifying" is literary theft. But a writer, Louis XIV's perceptor (according to Ibanes) said, "One may rob as the bees do it, without harming anybody, merely sucking honey from the flowers; but robbery in the manner of an ant, which carries away the whole grain, should never be imitated." Says Ibanes, "This subtle distinction greatly pleased Anatole France, who added, 'A situation does not belong to the first who hits upon it, but to him who knows how to stamp it powerfully upon the memories of men.'"

For myself I should say that originality does not lie in the phraseology, but in the writer's insight. I like to go back to the great Teacher. When he came the subjects of human thought were old. His originality lies in where all originality must lie, in the depth, the adequacy, the finality of the meaning which he put into the old words. He took the old words about great universalities and the sweet simplicities of human existence and filled them with a new content. And, through the depth of his insight, his words to-day come trailing clouds of glory.

I look over what I have written, dear reader, and I see in what large preserves I have been roaming. I cannot close with words of my own, but must use the well-worn words of Montesquieu—"I have plucked a garland of flowers, and the only thing I call my own is the string that ties them."—J. M. in the Christian Science Monitor.

The Very Idea!

An angry quarrel between a married couple over a game of contract bridge ended in the woman shooting her husband dead at Kansas City.

"You're a bum bridge player," young Mrs. Jim G. Bennett said to her husband after a game of bridge with two neighbours, which ended in her being ten-pence down.

Retaliatory words were followed by rising anger, and finally Bennett struck his wife.

Sobbing, she rushed to her bedroom, got a revolver, and shot her husband twice, killing him. She was subsequently arrested on a charge of murder in the first degree.

The couple with whom the Bennetts were playing bridge stated that the hand on which Bennett went set after his wife had raised his bid of "one spade" to "four spades," with an intervening bid of "two diamonds," was "wonderful."

Bennett is said to have held six trumps, including two honours, while dummy's hand, on which his wife raised his bid, contained the other three honours.

Some more "howlers":

In the eighteenth century travelling was very romantic; most of the highroads were only bridal paths.

An old Massachusetts negro was asked his opinion of the officially-approved non-alcoholic "near beer."

He pondered long before he replied, "Well, it's like this, sah. It looks like beer, it smells like beer, and it tastes like beer, but—it haint got no persuasion."

Policeman in a motor case at Bromley—I saw the marks of the car on the road, but they were invisible.

Woman, at North London—From the tone in which he spoke to me you would think he is the only man on the earth.

Tottenham Wife—When I told my husband I wanted a day's holiday he hit me on the head, and I had to go to hospital.

Clerk at Bromley to a police inspector—I believe you questioned the prisoner, and he told you a lot? Inspector—Yes; a lot of lies.

Havent I told 'e three times as it's high water at 5.55? exclaimed the old salt.

"Oh, yes, sir," said the little girl, "but I like seeing your whiskers waggle when you say five-fifty-five."

The porter ran along the platform as the train began to move off, to give a passenger the ticket he had got for her.

"Here's your ticket, ma'am; six an' tuppence it cost," he gasped. "Here's six shillings, my man," said the flurried old lady, leaning out of the carriage window. "Keep the tuppence for yourself!"

POWER FROM THE SEA.

FRENCH SCIENTISTS TESTS POSTPONED.

The production of power by utilizing the difference in the temperature of the sea at the surface and at 6,000 ft. deep, is predicted with certainty by Georges Claude, the inventor, who has returned from Cuba where he has been conducting his experiments. He had had luck with the weather this year.

His apparatus which consists of an immensely long pipe, was damaged while being towed into position, and this necessitated the postponing of the operations till next April.

M. Claude is convinced that he will then realize his project which, if his claim is sound, should be a revolutionary development in the production of power. "I am absolutely certain," he said, "that next year I shall have working a sort of factory able to work all the year round."

Asked why it was necessary to work in Cuba, M. Claude explained that his invention required a high sea temperature not to be found on the coasts of France.

YESTERDAY.

H. E. the General Officer Commanding, China Command, was "At Home" to Warrant Officers, N.C.O.'s and men working in the Headquarters Offices yesterday afternoon. A fine muster showed how many really are working in Headquarters. On arrival the guests were most graciously met by General Sandilands, and asked to take tea.

Tea, cakes, and other eatables were very expeditiously served by Chinese "boys" from Government House.

From 3.30 p.m. tennis was indulged in, among the winners being S. M. Turner and Cpl. Fennell, R.A.S.C., who beat S/Sgt. Ward and Cpl. "Crowcroft," R.A.S.C., in the Men's doubles.

Condr. Paver and Mrs. Turner beat Mrs. de Linde and Q. M. S. Scott.

Officers and their wives who took part in the entertainment of the guests included:—Col. and Mrs. H. A. Stewart, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Moore, Major and Mrs. H. S. S. Herbert, Major and Mrs. J. L. P. McNair, Major and Mrs. W. K. Morrison, R.A.M.C., Captain D. R. M. Cameron, A.D.C. to G.O.C., Captain and Mrs. de Linde, the Rev. and Mrs. Scott Little.

Side-shows were provided, including a Chinese equivalent of a Punch-and-Judy Show, and some tumbler (not of the glass variety), who showed the assembled company how to fall lightly.

LOCAL BILLIARDS.

LUSITANO V. INSTITUTE OF ENGINEERS.

A very enjoyable evening was spent when the members of the Club Lusitano entertained a team from the Institution of Engineers and Shipbuilders at billiards yesterday. The result was as follows:

	Institute.	Lusitano.
W. B. Haslett	117	L. A. Osmund 150
Mae. Dubois	117	J. A. Barradins 150
S. F. Taylor	144	S. S. Sequira 150
L. J. Blackburn	87	M. R. Beltrao 150
A. J. Pilgrim	88	A. C. Rozario 150
W. Brown	150	J. F. Silva 146
	703	896

It was a very creditable performance on the part of the Institute, considering that they were playing on totally strange tables.

At the conclusion of the games, both the Presidents of the Clubs, the Hon. Mr. J. P. Braga and Mr. L. J. Blackburn, made appropriate and witty speeches.

A return match has been fixed for Friday, the 15th instant, when it is expected that the Institute will turn the tables on the Lusitano team.

COURT SCENE IN READING.BEDLAM WHEN THE ACTOR IS FREED.

London, Oct. 10.

Almost unprecedented in the criminal history of Great Britain were the scenes of acclamation which followed the reading of the jury's finding of murder against persons unknown in the inquest into the death of Alfred Oliver, the Reading tobacconist, who was killed on June 26. The jury added that the evidence was too conflicting to establish definitely the guilt of anyone.

The words were scarcely out of the foreman's mouth when the silent court became like bedlam. Phillip Yale Drew, the American actor, who had been closely examined concerning his movements of the night of the murder, was given an ovation which would have been fitting for any national hero safely rescued from the jaws of death.

Women, springing up, waving handkerchiefs and cheering, and men threw up their hats, stamped their feet, and shouted: "Three cheers for Mr. Drew!"

The Chief Constable shook hands with Drew, and offered to enable him to go out by the side-door. "I shall shirk nothing," replied Drew, and the police cleared a way through the cheering crowds in the court, from which Drew emerged into the square, which was packed with thousands, who surged forward. Sweeping off 20 burly policemen, they hugged, kissed, and patted Drew on the back, finally carrying him shoulder-high to a hotel, where the crowd refused to disperse.

Drew, accompanied by Mr. Lindo (his employer) and Mrs. Lindo, came to the balcony, where he made a speech of thanks. He nearly broke down when he referred to the prayers sent up on his behalf, and added: "God bless you." He turned to Mrs. Lindo, kissed her lips, and departed, kissing his hand to the crowd.

Mr. Lindo has been inundated with offers to revive "The Monster," including one offer from a West End theatre. Drew says that he will act as he never before acted.

"The Monster" was the play in which Drew was acting on the date of the murder.

LETTER GOLF.

SILK HOSE aren't proper on the golf course, but they are fine on the letter-golf links because you can't get a hole in one.

1.—The idea of letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN.

2.—You can change only one letter at a time.

3.—You must have a complete word, of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count.

4.—The order of letters cannot be changed.
One solution is printed on another page.

GROWING BURDEN OF OFFICIALDOM.

BLAME PLACED ON PARLIAMENT.

An attack on Parliament for its appointment of "hordes of officials" was made by Mr. H. G. Wedd (Langport), at the provincial meeting of the Law Society at Bourne-mouth.

The Ministry of Health, he said, had ordered that every man who milked a cow should first wash his hands, and presumably inspectors were appointed to enforce the ordinance. A practical farmer had told him that it the Milk and Dairies Order of 1926 were strictly carried out it would be impossible for any farmer to produce a single gallon of milk.

The earliest and most striking example of the power of the official could be found in the administration of the Housing Act, 1919. Under that Act the cost of building went up to about £1,000 a house, and 208,000 houses were built, which were costing the taxpayer £40 a year per house. The local authority, in one case, had pointed out that it was absurd to build a labourer's house at a cost of £1,000, but the Ministry would hear no excuse.

In some counties under the Rating Act, 1925, public elementary schools were rated. Thus the County Rating Office levied rates on the County Education Office property, and the County Treasury Office paid the money out again to the County Education Office to make up for the increased cost of maintaining the school.

To such an extent had the custom of legislation by department grown that in 1920 eighty-two Acts of Parliament were passed and 2,473 statutory rules and orders issued.

A Mussolini Wanted.

"What is the remedy?" Mr. Wedd asked. "It is the House of Commons who is responsible, and its members must be called upon to grapple with their own creations. If only Mussolini could be invited to go through the Civil Service Estimates when the next Budget was in course of preparation, we should no doubt see a change."

"In default of this we must wait to the next General Election, but when it comes all parties must join hands to see that no members shall go to Westminster who have not given a solemn pledge that the expenses of the Civil Service shall be thoroughly and practically reduced."

Sir Harry Pritchard, (London) said that there were two sides to the question. There had been a marked improvement in the milk supply during recent years.

Mr. R. W. Whitehead (Bournemouth) said that the Act dealing with the Poor Law had created an enormous amount of officialdom, and had taken from the "voiceless, voiceless, and friendless" occupants of the workhouses any personal touch with those who had been appointed guardians of the poor.

£25,000 FOR THE LONDON LIBRARY.

WINDFALL FROM A MEMBER'S ESTATE.

The London Library will, it is understood, benefit to the extent of about £25,000 by the will of Major William Prevost, of Hawkhurst (Kent), who died in June.

Major Prevost, who had been a member of the famous library for many years, left estate valued at £40,769, with not personally £31,708.

After various legacies he bequeathed the residue

To the Trustees of the London Library, St. James's-square, for general purposes and benefit of the staff.

"It is a magnificent gift, and comes just at the right time," said a member of the committee to a Press representative.

Part for Rebuilding.
"So far as I know, no decision has yet been reached as to how the money will be spent, but probably part of it will be devoted to the rebuilding fund. A contribution to the staff superannuation fund may also be considered."

The London Library possesses 400,000 volumes, and is known to scholars in all parts of the world.

It owes its inception to Carlyle, who, because of the disadvantage he experienced in not having books of reference at hand, started an agitation which resulted in the foundation of the library in 1841.

For reference purposes the library is invaluable.

During the war, Government departments, and even the Cabinet, drew books from it without limit, one department having often 80 at a time.

RED REAR LIGHT FOR PEDESTRIANS.

JUDGE'S IDEA TO STOP STREET ACCIDENTS.

"There is a certain amount of sense in the suggestion that pedestrians going about in unlighted streets on dark nights should have lights attached to their persons, with a red rear light."

This was said by Judge Herbert Smith at Holt (Norfolk) County Court when he dismissed a claim for £93 damages made by a man who had been knocked down by a girl motor-cyclist on a dark night.

"I am no lover of motor-cyclists," he added, "but they are entitled to the benefit of the doubt in a court of law, if doubt exists."

PARTNERS' DISPUTE.

FRAUDULENT CONVERSION CHARGE FAILS.

A dispute between two partners in a native firm regarding the disposal of a cheque led to criminal proceedings being instituted before Mr. A. W. G. H. Grantham, at the Central Police Court, yesterday afternoon.

Cheung Yin-san, senior partner in the New Piece Goods Trading Company, brought a charge of fraudulent conversion of an amount of $150 contained in a cheque, against Lai Chi-kong, a co-partner. The charge was denied.

Mr. F. C. E. Rendall appeared for the complainant, and Mr. E. S. C. Brooks for the defendant.

In evidence, the complainant said that, on September 24 last, the defendant asked him for a cheque for $145 for the purpose of establishing credit with a German firm through the American Express Company. He filled in the body of the cheque and after having got witness to sign it, took the cheque to the Bank.

"Returning later, defendant informed the witness that the receipt would be sent over by the Bank in two weeks' time. When that date arrived, defendant again put him off, saying that the Bank was too busy then, to attend to the matter and had requested them to wait for a further ten days.

On October 19, witness decided to investigate the matter, and discovered that the cheque had been cashed. When taxed with the fact, defendant admitted that he had cashed the cheque and expressed his sense of regret that he should have done such a thing. He also said he was prepared to bear the consequences. Failing to secure repayment of the money, which belonged to the firm, witness applied to the police for a warrant.

Cross-examined by Mr. Brooks, witness admitted that defendant was a partner in the firm, although to the extent of only $150. Witness denied that he had agreed to the employment of the defendant as a clerk or salesman of the firm, stating that whatever services the defendant had put in were considered as only being in the nature of co-operative efforts. It was not true that an amount of $40 had been agreed upon as a monthly salary for the defendant.

No Present Salary.

Replying to further questions by Mr. Brooks, witness said that the matter of salary was discussed only in relation to future prospects, it being agreed that after the business had commenced to show a profit, each one of the partners was to draw between $10 and $20 a month for expenses. It was not true that he had quarrelled with the defendant over this question of salary. Ever since the question of the cheque cropped up to become an issue between them, defendant had continued working for the firm, appearing at his post several hours a day.

The business had not yet shown a profit, and witness, questioned on the point of a man being willing to work for such a long period without prospects of profits or wages, said that in their case it was agreed that defendant was to receive a salary next year, when it was expected that the business would have improved.

Questioned in regard to the delay before he took up the present proceedings, witness replied that he had been hoping that the defendant would make good the sum. He denied that it was only a matter concerning accounts between them.

Two folios from the firm, including a brother of the complainant, gave corroborative evidence, testifying to having seen the cheque made out and to having heard the apologetic reply which the defendant was alleged to have made when questioned in regard to the disposal of the money.

One of these witnesses, while admitting that he was giving evidence on behalf of the complainant, disagreed with Mr. Brooks that he was impelled thereto by the sense that the complainant was his employer.

A statement to the police was put in, this showing that, when charged, the defendant had said: "I had $150 share in the complainant's shop. As I wanted to withdraw my share, I took the $145 back."

Mr. Brooks then submitted that he had no case to answer, in view of the common claim which both parties had to the amount of the cheque. He also referred to the facts connected with the defendant's case that he was withdrawing his share from the firm.

Mr. Grantham said he must rule against Mr. Brooks as regards defendant's responsibility as a partner under the cheque. Obviously, his Worship observed, the amount which each party possessed under the disputed cheque was in proportion to the share of the capital, which each respectively held, and the disparity in the shares was against the defendant.

Defendant's Case.

In evidence, defendant contended that it was agreed, when he put in his share of the capital, that the firm was to pay him $40 a month as salary in addition to any profits accruing from his participation in the business. In point of fact no profits or wages were paid during the following months and, in September last, he pressed for the withdrawal of the $150 and for payment of his salary. The complainant had then agreed, after much pressing, to set off a cheque which had been made out in favour of a German firm, against this $150.

Cross-examined by Mr. Rendall, witness said he had not altered the particulars on the stub of the cheque because he had not seen the cheque book since the matter was settled in the manner he described.

In giving his decision, Mr. Grantham said it was to be believed that the defendant was not prepared to put in his full time in the expectations only of profits, which if materialising would be negligible on the small share he invested in the business. After a long period of unfruitfulness, without wages and the profits still a matter for conjecture, it was natural that he should want to get back his money, as in the manner described. What he then got was within the limits of his share, and was not necessarily fraudulent conversion. The onus being on the prosecution, it was for them to prove fraudulent conversion. In his Worship's view, the prosecution had not done so, and the defendant would be therefore discharged.

LICENSING BOARD.

RENEWAL OF PUBLICAN AND OTHER APPLICATIONS.

The Licensing Board met in the Council Chamber yesterday afternoon for consideration of a number of applications under the Liquors Consolidation Ordinances of 1911 and 1917.

The meeting was presided over by the Hon. Mr. W. T. Southern, Colonial Secretary. Others present were Messrs. C. D. Melbourne, H. B. L. Dowbiggin, C. G. Alabaster, K.C., W. L. Pattenden, Dr. W. V. M. Koch and Major C. Willson (Secretary).

The following applications were renewed:

Publican's Licence.—The Regulus Bay Hotel, Hongkong Hotel, Peninsula Hotel, Palace Hotel, Kowloon Hotel.

Publican's Licence without bar.—St. Francis Hotel, Lane Crawford's Restaurant, Hotel Savoy.

Hotel Keeper's Adjunct Licence.—Peak Hotel, Station Hotel, Tokyo Hotel, Chitose Hotel, Sushiro Hotel, The Metropole Hotel, Chitose Kwan Hotel, Empress Hotel, Tung Shan Hotel, Hotel Asia and the Great China Hotel.

Restaurant Keeper's Adjunct Licence.—Yamakawa Hotel, Cafe Alexandra, The South China Restaurant, Queen's Cafeteria, Ka Ping, Asahi Beer Hall and The Prince's Cafe.

Referring to the application of the Queen's Cafeteria, the chairman mentioned that there was a suggestion that the kitchen was inadequate for the size of the business. It was very hot and stuffy. This could be remedied by opening windows in the staircase and installing extractor fans in the yard.

Mr. Yu Man-cho, the applicant, was called before the Board and informed of the defect in his premises.

Mr. Yu, in reply to the chairman, said that he had already opened the windows and installed one fan.

The application was confirmed on the understanding that it was certified that the work was done.

UNION CHURCH.

SUCCESSFUL JUMBLE SALE HELD YESTERDAY.

The Jumble Sale organised by the ladies of the Union Church, yesterday afternoon, was a great success, the multiplicity of goods offered being sold in record time.

It seemed an impossibility that the laden stalls could be cleared in less than an hour, but this was the result which the hard working ladies achieved. The Church annex, in which the sale was held, was packed with buyers from the moment the doors opened, and the bulk of the visitors left the Church premises laden with bargains. The proceeds of the sale will be devoted to Union Church charities.

The members of the committee and ladies who assisted included: Mesdames P. C. Young, C. B. Brown, E. T. Hamilton, N. Drummond, N. Curtis, G. Mitchell, D. McNeill, Calvert, P. D. Wilson, E. Ritchie, E. Purvis and C. Price.

LADY SENTENCED.

DOCTOR WHO TREATED

A CHINESE.

Harbin, Nov. 8.

A lady doctor, Dr. Keselman, employed by the railway at Tsitaihar, charged with causing the death of a Chinese, has been found guilty and sentenced to one year's imprisonment.

The deceased applied for medical treatment, when Dr. Keselman found in his windpipe a hard piece of Chinese bread. To extract it she used a probe. The deceased during the operation became nervous, and grabbed the probe, releasing the safety lock, this resulting in half the instrument sticking in his bronchia. The deceased refused to agree to the operation necessary to remove the obstacle, and consequently died.

Apart from these criminal proceedings, action has been instituted by the relatives of the deceased jointly against Dr. Keselman and the Chinese Eastern Railway, for damages amount to 50,000 gold roubles.

IMPERSONATED MAN ARRESTED.

NEARLY SENT TO PRISON
BY MISTAKE.

A strange story of impersonation, which nearly led to an innocent man going to prison, was unfolded when application was made at Edmonton County Court for the return of £15 which had been paid into court by Mr. Benjamin Lipton, of Mason's flats, Commercial-road, E.

Counsel for Lipton said that on August 27 two policemen arrested Lipton at his works, producing a warrant which alleged that he owed £15 on a judgment summons obtained against the London and Colonial Trading Company.

Debtor Since Dead.
Rather than go to prison Lipton paid the £15 under protest after borrowing the money from his employer.

Lipton's counsel added that it had now been discovered that the London and Colonial Trading Company (which owed the money) had been carried on by a man named Flitton, who died in February.

Flitton had not only registered the company in Lipton's name but had also impersonated him.

A solicitor's clerk said he had served the judgment summons on a man at Edmonton who told him that he was Benjamin Lipton, of the London and Colonial Trading Company. That man had paid several instalments, reducing the debt from £21 to £15. That man, added the clerk, was not the Benjamin Lipton who was in court.

"Serious Blunder."
Lipton's counsel said he did not suggest that the creditor company had acted otherwise than in perfectly good faith.

Judge Crawford: A very serious blunder has been made in this case. The liberty of the subject is of the greatest importance, not only to the individual concerned but to the whole of the community.

He made an order for the return of the £15 to Mr. Lipton with costs.

TENSE SITUATION IN HONAN.

RIVAL ARMIES TAKING MEASURE.

CHIANG'S OWN TROOPS FOR FRONT LINE.

TROUBLE WITH FIFTH?

Shanghai, Nov. 9.
Reuter's Hankow correspondent states that according to Chang Chih-chung who returned from the front by aeroplane on Thursday evening, Chiang Kai-shek has moved his headquarters from Hsuehchow to Yuchow. He will personally direct the front line operations.
As far as can be ascertained the main line of the Kuominchun forces extends from Lushan through Paofeng and Kiangsien to Mianlin, while strong forces are concentrated at Nanyang and Yangtze with Chumantien and Laohokow the respective objectives.

A number of troops of the Fifth Division arrived at Hunkow from the front and were transferred to Wuchang for "training purposes."

It is learned that the Generalissimo's own armies, who hitherto have been held in reserve, are now being drafted into the front line.

Yen for Nanking.

Shanghai, Nov. 8.
A definite turn has been reached in the war situation by the announcement made at Taiyuan by Marshal Yen Hsi-shan persisting that he is to throw in his lot with the National Government. It is stated that Marshal Yen Hsi-shan will issue a long proclamation urging the Kuominchun militaries to stop war in Honan and in the event of the Kuominchun failing to comply with his demand he will lead two Divisions of Shansi troops to hinder the progress of the Kuominchun.

Marshal Yen denies that he had any understanding with Marshal Feng Yu-hsiang before the latter's subordinates declared war on Nanking. Marshal Yen has sent a telegram to General Soong Chih-yuen, a prominent Kuominchun Divisional Commander, pointin-out that he, Marshal Yen, fully sympathises with the Kuominchun in asking for funds for their maintenance in the famine-stricken areas in Shansi and Honan, but he is not responsible for the belligerent attitude of the Kuominchun.

Two Generals Wounded

Shanghai, Nov. 8.
Two of the most prominent Kuominchun Generals, Sun Liangcheng, the head of the First Kuominchun Division, and Shih King-ting, were wounded among other Kuominchun officers at the battle in Szechuho on Wednesday, following a fierce counter-attack by Nanking Central Government troops in an effort to recapture Szechuho.

It will be recalled that the city was taken by the Kuominchun early this week. On Wednesday, the Nanking troops surprised the Kuominchun by suddenly launching a violent attack. General Sun Liang-cheng and Shih King-ting were holding a military conference inside the city at the time and they hastily left the conference room to direct the Kuominchun units and save the city.

The Nanking troops used heavy artillery and machine guns and inflicted numerous casualties.
A small contingent of Kuominchun at Szechuho is still holding

Photo taken on the occasion of the wedding, at the Rosary Church, Kowloon, last Sunday, of Mr. E. J. da Luz and Miss Olga Maria dos Remedios.

the city, which however, is expected to fall soon. The main body of Sun Liang-cheng's troops is concentrating its attention on an attempt to cut the communications of the Nanking troops between Hsuehchow and Changchow.

Sinchang Captured

Yesterday the Kuominchun captured Sinchang District which is situated between Hsuehchow and Changchow on the Lung-Hai Railway. Violent Kuominchun asaults on Changchow are anticipated during the week-end.

Hankow reports state that this morning the 8th Nanking Division, under General Miao Bing-wan, departed from Hankow on the Peking-Hankow Railway, for Hsuehchow to reinforce the Government troops at Changchow. Troops of the 6th and 44th Divisions left Hankow on Wednesday and Thursday respectively for Changchow.

Nanking Offensive

Honan messages suggest that despite the desperate efforts of the Kuominchun to take Chang-chow, the Nanking troops are still able to hold their own and a second Nanking general counter-attack on the Kuominchun was announced on Wednesday. The Nanking troops attacked in three directions, with the centre aiming at Mianlin, the flanking marching into Yung-yang and the left wing with Hsuehchow as its objective.

Marshal Chiang Kai-shek, in the company of General Ho Cheng-chun, directed the Nanking units in the attack on Yungchun yesterday morning. He returned to Hsuehchow in the evening. Teng-feng continues to be the battle ground of the Kuominchun and Nanking troops and fierce warfare is still continuing, with General Hsu Yuen-chuen leading the Nanking army.

Government Claims

Nanking, Nov. 8.
An official communique issued by the Waichiaopu states that the Kuominchun insurgents along the Lung-Hai railway are in a precarious position.

A military conference summoned by Tang Seng-chi has decided to capture Mienchih in five days and Tungkuang in ten days.

"Owing to the mobilisation of Shansi troops, 50,000 rebels have surrendered to Liu Chen-hun, while attempting to enter Shansi
after their defeat at Chiyuan."
